SPEAKER FOR DAY IS MISS DONALDSON

Never has a woman been speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives until today, when that honor was conferred upon Representative Sylvia M. Donaldson of Brockton. Mounting the rostrum, Miss Donaldson was accorded a tremendous ovation by women who packed the galleries for the occasion of the Legislature's tribute to its only woman solon. Speaker John C. Hull conducted Miss Donaldson to the chair as speaker pro tem and handed her his gavel.

HODGE, CALIF., Feb. 17.—In California, if you want a thing in a hurry, you can get it. David Davidson, foreman of a building crew, brought here from Los Angeles, and asked to build a substantial camp house, with twelve rooms and three bath rooms, in three weeks, will finish it in two weeks. The wonderful climate does not diminish energy.

CALIFORNIANS are passionately devoted to their State. A native son, taking gasoline at the summit of Cajon Pass, 4,230 feet up, had written on the back of his car, in large letters, this legend: "Just back from Florida. Barnum was right."

"No," said he, "I have never been to Florida. I'm not fool enough to leave California. That sign on my car? That's just patriotic California advertising."

4 GET GATE IN HARVARD FOR REVEL

As a result of an escapade, which included entering a closed inn at Norwell for a midnight dancing party with a group of Boston girls, four Harvard students left Cambridge today, expelled by the university authorities.

The students are Edwin H. Lambert of Boston, Frederic Oatman of New York, Paul N. Morgan, Jr., of Worcester and Harry S. L. Reno, Jr., of Chicago.

These youths, together with two other men, were fined $20 each in Abington District Court last month for trespassing in the Crittendon Inn, Norwell, where the previous night party was staged.

Five girls who were found in the inn with the students were not taken into custody. The hostelry was locked up for the Winter and it was the untimely glow of lights and unusual sounds of revelry in the place that led Norwell residents to send an alarm to the State police.

Reports of the affair reached the ears of Harvard officials, the four students were called upon to explain their prank and the result was their expulsion.

The only explanation made to the police by the youths at the time of the arrest was that the inn was owned by a relative of one of the girls, who, according to the police, shouted to State Police Corporal Pelletier and Officer Best as they entered:

"Say, we're all right. My aunt owns this place."

The case of "Pat" Lambert is described as most pitiful by his dorm

MILL MAN HANGS SELF

Webster, Feb. 18.—J. Perry Parsons, thirty-five, wealthy woolen mill owner, committed suicide today by hanging himself in the cellar of his home.

His body was found by a caretaker. Two sisters of Parsons who were in the house at the time and who were first notified by the caretaker collapsed and are in serious condition from the shock.

Parsons was a graduate of Dartmouth College in the class of 1914.

As owner of the Josiah Ferry Estate Woolen Mills, he was a leading figure in the industrial life of his community and was prominent nationally in the woolen trade.

He was unmarried, and besides his two sisters he is survived by his mother. She is at present Wintering in Florida with an aunt.

The fact that Parsons was in apparent excellent health added considerable mystery to his act. His personal life was exemplary in the opinion of friends, and it is thought he may have been secretly depressed mentally because of worry over his business.

PITY PRISCILLA, HOLDUP FAILED TO THRILL HER

For month in and month out, nineteen-year-old Priscilla Newcomb has perched in the box office outside the Central Square Theatre in Cambridge, on the rim, but never nearer, of the reel world of adventure back oof the portals behind her.

Today, when adventure walked up to her and poked a gun in her peachblow complexion poor Priscilla did not get even a single thrill.

But you can't depend on a woman.

Priscilla had been making change when a youth who had been standing near her ticket booth walked over and poked a revolver through the little glass hole and growled for money.

Priscilla's big moment had come, but she muffed it.

"Who do you think you are—a cowboy?" she demanded.

And so the holdup man, with wounded feelings, walked away. He was vastly hurt and he showed it.

Police Inspector Maher arrested Francis Cutretta, 20, of No. 12 Norfolk street, Cambridge, a salesman, a few minutes later. He had a gun in his pocket.

Priscilla identified him as the holdup man she had turned down and went back selling her tickets.

Some day she'll going to watch the show and discover that they don't treat hold-up men that way.

VERA BLAMES EARL'S U. S. KIN FOR EXCLUSION

New York, Feb. 18 (I.N.S.).—Vera, Countess of Cathcart, from the detention rooms of Ellis Island today denounced Secretary of Labor Davis' decision to report her from the United States as cowardly and told for the first time of her opinion that she "had been discriminated against because the Bradley Martin family influence had brought the necessary pressure to bear."

The Earl of Craven, partner in the "moral turpitude" for which she is barred from the United States, is a son of the wealthy Mrs. Bradley Martin. The Earl and Vera eloped while married and were both subsequently divorced. He was admitted to the country a few weeks ago and was visiting his uncle in New York with his wife when Vera arrived.

Vera talked of letters she had which would prove intensely embarrassing; she scornfully pointed out instances in which individuals "far more culpable of moral turpitude" had been freely admitted to this country, and she wound up with a defiance of Secretary Davis, the British consul in New York and the relatives of the Earl of Craven, whom, she intimated, are "afraid of her."

"Why was I not allowed to go to Washington to talk for myself?

"Why is it stated by some unknown persons that I am 45 years old, when it is a matter of common record that I was born May 14, 1894?

RAPS CRAVEN'S WIFE.

"Why do they say I crave publicity, when all I am doing is coming here to meet friends to try to produce my play, 'Ashes.'

"I did not come here seeking publicity. If I wanted publicity my name alone would give me that. They say that I am a nobody. It is Lady Craven who is a nobody. She is only the daughter of a clerk. I have been received by royalty, I have been received at court."

The Countess was agitated when

COOLIDGE STAYS ABED, SUFFERS FROM A COLD

Washington, Feb. 18.—President Coolidge was confined today to his bed, a victim of a heavy cold.

Major James E. Coupal, the President's physician, is in attendance.

All engagements for today were cancelled.

Reiterating that there was no cause for alarm or any relapse in the President's condition, Secretary Sanders said Mr. Coolidge had decided to remain in bed in the hope that the cold could be controlled.

Mr. Sanders explained that the President was taking extra precautions to safeguard his health because he has an engagement to deliver a Washington's Birthday address here next Monday night before the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association and was anxious to be in good physical trim for this event.

WARRANTS OUT FOR 11 IN BAR EXAM FRAUD, HEARING TOMORROW

Eleven secret indictments in the Suffolk County Bar examination frauds were returned in Superior Court today by the Grand Jury.

Those indicted are charged with conspiracy to defraud the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Indictment warrants against the eleven men were handed to Inspector John Mitchell by Judge Fosdick and the defendants will be notified to appear in court tomorrow for arraignment.

Investigation of the alleged bar examinations fraud resulted from the tests of last July, when a number of individuals who had fallen down on the examinations many times before passed with high ratings.

It was disclosed that the examiners' questions were circulated in advance. The character committee of the Bar Association handed over evidence to the State and after the examinations were reheld Assistant Attorney General Alfred Shrigley gave the case to the grand jury.

Inspector Mitchell interviewed more than 300 applicants for admission to the bar in his search for evidence in the case. The State Attorney General's office was assigned to handle the matter instead of the district attorney's office after a conference between Chief Justice Rugg of the Supreme Court, Attorney General Benton and District Attorney O'Brien.

Disclosure of the fraud forced all the bar candidates who passed the tests last July to take them over again.

HUB SCHOONER IS WRECKED

Miami, Fla., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Schooner James E. Newsan of Boston, loaded with lumber, was pounding to pieces in the surf off Miami Beach today after her crew had left the ship.

A week ago the schooner grounded on entering the port and became waterlogged. The channel was blocked for one day until harbor officials ordered the ship towed to sea, over protest of the Newson's master, who contended that with assistance he could make a docking.

The schooner was launched at Booth Bay Harbor, Maine, in 1919 and was of 707 tons gross.

FIGHTS TO KEEP PRIEST'S GARB FROM STATE HOUSE

A proposal of Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware that the uniform of the late Father John B. Devalles, chaplain of the 104th Regiment of the Yankee Division, be placed in the State House was opposed today by Benjamin F. Thompson of the Charlestown branch of the United Veterans of the Republic, at a legislative hearing.

Thompson said he was not "narrow-minded" but was of the opinion the State should pause before giving recognition to any denomination. Senator Edward J. Cox of East Boston reminded him the "garb" of a clergyman is the uniform of the United States Army and not connected with any religion.

TELLS OF THREAT TO 'DO JOB' ON QUIGLEY

Jacob "Jack" London, important Government witness in the Chelsea rum conspiracy trial in Federal court, boasted in December of last year, that he planned to "do a job" on Inspector Thomas Quigley, one of the 17 defendants, according to testimony today.

Sergt. Walter A. Barden of the Chelsea police, testifying in his own defense, declared London made the boast to him in the presence of Officer Flynn, that he intended to testify in the present trial and "send Tom Quigley away for 20 years."

The statement, according to the witness, was followed by the suggestion

REFUSE MALONE HALL FOR 'RED' BIMBA TALK

Brockton, Feb. 18.—Cancelling a lease on a hall in Brockton where Dudley Field Malone was to speak next Tuesday night and a charge from Hudson that Anthony Bimba officiated at an alleged "Bolshevik funeral" in that town featured the Bimba case today.

Bimba is to go on trial Wednesday here for alleged blasphemy and sedition and Dudley Field Malone, eminent Gotham barrister, who was prominent in the Scopes trial at Dayton, Tenn., is slated to be one of his court defenders.

The lawyer was to speak at a mass meeting Tuesday in Knights of Pythias Hall, but when he was connected with the Bimba case and the purpose of the meeting was apparent to Pythian officials, the lease on the hall for the night was cancelled by Charles C. Hurd, custodian.

Harry Oddie, secretary of the Brockton branch, International Labor Defense League, which is back of Bimba's defense, scurried the Bradley-Martins, relatives of the Earl of Craven were mentioned.

"They are afraid I will publish letters, but, understand, I am not vindictive. I made one mistake in my life and that was with the Earl of Craven.

FIGHT ONLY BEGUN.

"I thank God this is not British justice. I have committed no crime, I am not a social outcast. I am innocent. If I have been frank in my statements to the authorities it is because I am honest and always want to be honest. In England, one is not guilty till proved guilty. In this country one is apparently guilty without having been proved so. Thank God, they can't send me to the electric chair.

"But, if they will let me fight, my fight is but just begun. I am going to confer with my solicitors and I am going to instruct them to make immediate application for a writ of habeas corpus.

"No doubt I will be placed under bonds then pending a decision on my application for that writ.

In explaining his decision, Secretary Davis said:

"The Secretary of Labor is bound to determine the question involved solely on the evidence submitted and cannot exercise discretion. He can, and in this case has, considered legal arguments based on law and the record, but he could not consider the extraneous influences from many sources urged for and against the admission of this alien."

This referred to the several bushel basketsful of letters, telegrams, petitions, etc., protesting and supporting the earlier decision of the department that the Countess was "undesirable."

CRAVENS SAIL SATURDAY.

All this "extraneous matter" was swept into the discard today, and the immigration highcurps sighed with relief over thus finally disposing of this embarrassing case ever presented to them.

Government attorneys will oppose the writ of habeas corpus and legally uphold the department's power in the contemplated court action of the Countess' attorneys, but the case itself is considered in Washington to be closed.

Meanwhile, the Earl of Craven, Vera's partner in the "moral turpitude" of an elopement of a married pair, is in Montreal, where he will be joined by his wife. They plan to sail from Halifax to Bermuda next Saturday.

Reprisals for Vera's Ban Demanded by Britishers

London, Feb. 18 (I.N.S.).—The British government is striving its best not to become involved in the case of Vera, Countess Cathcart, banned from the United States despite pressure which is being exerted by influential persons to force the foreign office to take the matter up officially with the United States.

In addition to the suggestion made by Captain Fairfax, M. P., that the government consider reprisals, Sir Newton Moore has announced that he will ask Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, the advisability of conferring with the United States with a view to adopting reciprocal immigration legislation.

GIRLS SEIZED IN RAID FREED

This time "the man pays."

Two Boston girls, arrested in a raid on a Back Bay apartment were free today in Roxbury District Court, and two men arrested with them were made to pay fines.

The fact that Oliver Walcott Gaines, is a Technology student, and Benjamin Franklin Lippold is a business man, did not influence Judge Ahern.

He released sixteen-year-old Dorothy Ryan, of Dorchester, on probation for a year, and from Agnes Parker, eighteen years old, of Roxbury, accepted the explanation that she is soon to move to Detroit never to return to Boston.

Gaines was fined $16 and Lippold $25, on statutory charges. Other charges, including one of maintaining a disorderly house, against Lippold, were dismissed. All four defendants pleaded nolo.

The court session was the aftermath of a noisy fray between the girls in an apartment occupied by Lippold on Boylston street. Neighbors complained and police, breaking in, found the girls and Lippold and later arrested Gaines.

The girls had been missing from their homes for nine days.

'FREE RURAL MAIL DELIVERY' FOR SNOWBOUND BRIGHTON RESIDENCE DISTRICT

There's a thrill in playing the old-fashioned game of "postoffice," but it's not the same kind that Betty R. Perlis, Ransom road, enjoys daily as she trudges through the snow.

Jacob Perlis, Ransom road, Brighton, was served with notice he would have to call for his mail at the postoffice.

Above is a scene on Ransom road, Brighton, which is isolated by snowdrifts and cut off from daily calls by the post man. Several neighbors have joined Jacob Perlis, who has placed a box on a post at a convenient corner, and they get their mail the same way as does the farmers in the broad rural expanses of the Dakotas and Kansas.

HALL REFUSED MALONE FOR BIMBA TALK

around and finally engaged Canton Hall for the Malone meeting.

Two bills of particulars by the government were filed with the clerk of court, today, and set forth the manner in which Bimba is alleged to have violated the laws.

In one case, the English translation of the alleged Lithuanian speech quotes Bimba as denying God, and in the second preaching a revolution in this country similar to that which occurred in Russia, concluding with the statement that the red flag would wave over the Capitol at Washington and in Brockton as well.

It was announced that a meeting would take place tonight in Lithuanian National Association Hall, at which Bimba may speak.

From Hudson the charge was made today that Bimba was the man who officiated at the "Bolshevik funeral" of Mrs. Catherine Tumosiunas, which has torn the town of Hudson wide open.

Fr. Mullen has joined Hudson selectmen and the police in an effort to effect the deportation of an alien group in Hudson, alleged to be of the reddest red.

A threat of violence has been made against the pastor, according to the police, because of his activities against the Communist gang, and this is being investigated, together with a report that children are being initiated into radical doctrines at a "Red night school" in Hudson.

There was a hint of the atmosphere of Dayton, Tenn., in the Brockton air today, and some persons professed to look upon the Bimba trial next Wednesday as a near-parallel to the famous Dayton spat between fundamentalists and evolutionists.

Dudley Field Malone, distinguished attorney associated with the defence of Scopes, is to go to Brockton to defend Bimba. There is more than a possibility that Clarence A. Darrow, jurist extraordinary, may come to Massachusetts to lead the defence, just as he led the defence of Scopes.

The one burning question at Brockton Wednesday will be: "Who is to be the William J. Bryan of Brockton?"

Those who are interested in the defence of Bimba were heartened today by the news from the New York office of the National Labor Defence that Darrow was greatly interested in the case and might come to Brockton to lend his aid.

There are two features to the Bimba case which did not have a place in the Dayton trial, and which may prove embarrassing to the distinguished attorneys should they come to this State.

In the first place, the law on the Massachusetts statute books was not made for any special case, and therefore carefully worded. It simply states that he who denies the existence of God, or holds to contempt of God, His Word, or His Divinity, is guilty of a criminal offence.

Accordingly, if the defenders of Bimba are not particularly careful in the wording of their defence they may find themselves barred from the bar to the prisoner's dock. Such a step would be drastic, but it is the law.

Another point! Nobody ever questioned the Americanism of young Scopes. The accusations against him were purely on academic grounds. But the Brockton Lithuanians who are the accusers, real patriotic Americans, also charge Bimba with seditious utterance in urging the overthrow of the government of the United States by armed force.

King and Queen Go Broke Like Rest of Us

London, Feb. 23 (A.P.)—Even the King and Queen find themselves financially embarrassed sometimes.

Their Majesties were leaving the British industries fair today when a Salvation Army lass appealed to them for a contribution to the "self-denial fund."

The King and Queen looked helplessly at each other. Neither had any money, but both were anxious to give. Members of their entourage quickly solved the difficulty, and handsome contributions were forthcoming.

MARION TALLEY SUFFERS FROM 'KLIEG EYES'

New York, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Marion Talley, who scored a triumph in opera last night, discovered today that fame exacts tribute as well as it gives rewards. Miss Talley found herself suffering from "klieg eyes," that bane of theatrical and cinema stars.

Her eyelids were swollen and red from facing the glare of arc lights grouped about her last night for photographic purposes. She was unable to read the newspaper reviews of her debut, but members of her family read them to her.

UNABLE TO SLEEP.

Unable to sleep because of her smarting eyes, Miss Talley arose at 6 o'clock this morning.

"Everyone was just wonderful," she said, when interviewed in her apartment. "Most wonderful were the people from home."

Her sudden winning of a place in the limelight did not interrupt the family life of the Talleys. Mrs. Talley, wearing a gray house dress, bathed her daughter's eyes, alarmed at the inflammation.

MANY TLEGRAMS.

Next, they followed their custom of years. Mrs. Talley combed Marion's hair, twisting it into curls as she had done hundreds of times before. Then Marion combed her mother's hair.

Meanwhile, Miss Florence Talley, the singer's sister, was reading to them a hundred or more telegrams which had been received. They contained congratulations from old friends of the family and from strangers.

All this time Mr. Talley was missing from the family circle. A splashing was heard in the bathroom. Mr. Talley was taking his bath.

ORDER CURFEW ON BORDER IN 'SHAME DEATHS'

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Four men have been indicted for attacking Clyde and Audrey Petcet, American girls, in Tia Juana and the American government has issued an order to further close the border town to American visitors.

Luis M. Amadon, proprietor of the Oakland Bar; Refugio Alvarez, bartender; Zenaido Llanos, former Tijuana chief of police, and Francisco Gonzales, former policeman, were those indicted. The first three are charged with attacking the girls, while Gonzales was indicted for concealing the crime. Three others were freed.

While an order from the American Treasury Department closing the border from 6 p. m. to 8 a. m. cast a gloom over the streets of Tia Juana, the more prominent business men and officials declared that this order will mean a more rapid growth for Tia Juana.

It was declared that with the early closing order in effect Tia Juana will have its own hotels and general business concerns, and that it will begin an independent existence which will soon make it the most important Mexican city near San Diego.

The big attraction of Tia Juana, more impelling than its gambling houses and dives, is the race track, now in full swing of the Winter season. CHAPTER XVI.

Montpelier, Vt., Feb. 18.—There was a big fuss at North Stratford Jail when the revenue men called there and found only Harry Murdock and Knowlton. Word was sent out that I, the "Duchess of Alcohol," had escaped.

All sorts of rumors were circulated. I was credited with bribing a jailer and "sawing my way to freedom," and a lot of other rubbish. As a matter of fact the reason why the Federal men didn't find me there a few mornings after our transfer from Newport Jail was that I had been released.

I did not discover until later that it was due to a mistake, for which neither the jail authorities or I were to blame. But even that explanation did not stifle the flock of exaggerated theories about my melodramatic "bolt for freedom."

I don't think I am dumb or indiscreet enough to escape as a Federal prisoner. That would mean longer imprisonment. So I continued my career as a rum-runner ignorant for sometime of the stories they were telling about me. If I had heard some of the versions earlier I might have been more timid about operating as boldly as I did alone after my second arrest.

I was sorry to hear that Harry

RAIN FOR TONIGHT AND TOMORROW FORECAST

Rain tonight and tomorrow is predicted by the local weather bureau to follow a storm area approaching this region from Arkansas. Sleet, snow and rain have fallen in the Gulf States. A secondary disturbance is expected to arise in the South Atlantic States and Florida. There were no zero temperatures recorded in New England last night, and the mercury mark hereabouts early today was 36 above. Mild weather will prevail till tomorrow night, when it is expected a short cold wave will follow.

ONCE RICH, MOROSCO 'BROKE'

Theatrical Producer, in Bankruptcy, Owes $1,030,404; Has $200 in Clothes Only

New York, Feb. 18.—Oliver Morosco, theatrical producer, today filed a petition of voluntary bankruptcy in the seventh district United States Court.

He gave his liabilities as $1,032,404, and his assets as $200, the latter including six suits, two overcoats, two hats and a pair of shoes.

Morosco's real name is Oliver Mitchell and he is widely known in the producing field. A few years ago, he was rated as worth $5,000,000 and a leader in the world of amusement.

The majority of his creditors are hotels, costumers, lawyers who hold judgments and telegraph companies.

Recently Morosco appeared as a government witness in the hearing of charges against the Morosco Holding Company, whose officers were Federally indicted for defrauding through the mails. The charges were proven. Morosco, in his testimony declared he had been a dupe of the promoters.

He was exonarated of responsibility for the crash.

Seven of the promoters were indicted on charges of using the mails to defraud. Four of the men were found guilty, and upon appeal their sentences were confirmed. Three others were exonerated.

His wife and Peggy Hopkins Joyce are listed as two of his chief creditors, each being credited with claims of $15,000. Banks in Los Angeles and New York are listed as creditors for large sums, and among the items is a hotel bill of $4,000 for which Morosco pledged jewelry.

The Federal authorities declare that prohibition agents purchased liquor at the inn on two occasions this year, although last December the owners of the inn were enjoined by a Federal Court decree from selling or possessing intoxicants. The owners of the inn are Patrick B. and Ellis M. Sullivan.

SEIZE 2 THIEF SUSPECTS AND DOPE OUTFIT

Police claim to have recovered the most complete narcotics outfit ever found in New England in a raid today in South Boston in which they arrested Patrick Shaughnessy of Bolton street and James F. O'Dea of West Fourth street.

The two men are charged with violating the anti-drug laws, but other charges will be lodged against them, according to the authorities.

They are alleged to have stolen scores of articles of merchandise from delivery trucks in Boston streets, their method, police say, having been for one to take something from a parked truck and toss it into an automobile which his comrade drove up at the proper moment.

Seutne hunting for the men as a result of two separate investigations, one on the narcotics angle and the other for the alleged merchandise thefts, crossed trails at the psychological moment in South Boston today.

A combined raid followed. Sergeant Caverly and Bernard Norton of the headquarters narcotics squad seized 400 grains of morphine, syringes and other equipment, according to the police, while James Welch, superintendent of the Expressmen's League of Boston, found $3,000 worth of shoes, linen, tapestries, lamps and other goods.

70 FEARED DEAD IN HUGE UTAH AVALANCHE

Bingham, Utah., Feb. 18 (A.P.)—Thirty-five known dead with an equal number of persons missing was the toll today of the avalanche that overwhelmed the Highland Boy Mining Camp in Sap Gulch, near here.

Officials directing the search of the scrambled ruins of a score of buildings, one a three-story frame boarding place housing 50 persons, expressed the belief that in the neighborhood of 70 lives had been lost.

Only 18 of the known dead had been identified and there was the possibility that the 17 unidentified bodies were those of persons listed as missing and believed dead.

Rescue workers, numbering more than 50, were spurred in their task upon the debris by finding alive Jimmy McDonald and his wife, owners of the boarding house, after more than 14 hours imprisonment under the wreckage.

One man, Ed Halvorsen, was carried on the crest of the avalanche a distance of half a mile and only slightly injured. His wife is missing.

REPORT WILSON BILL TO CURB FIREARMS SALE

A bill calling for a drastic change in the firearms law and recommended by Police Commissioner Wilson was reported favorably today by the legislative committee on public safety. It provides that no firearm shall be sold unless the prospective purchaser has a license to carry it.

Bergdoll Now Accuses His Accuser

Mosbach, Germany, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Grover Bergdoll, American draft dodger, in his preliminary examination today claimed that Robert Sachs, the detective who brought the charges, attempted to extort hush money from him before lodging his complaint.

WADE TO RACE 'RED' TO POLE

Providence, R. I., Feb. 18.—Lieutenant Leigh Wade, round-the-world flier, who has resigned from the army to make a flight of exploration over the Arctic regions and possibly the North Pole, explained his aims during a talk before the local traffic club.

"Our trip," said the intrepid flier, "will be one of pure exploration. We will be equipped with at least three planes of large carrying capacity and a great cruising range."

Belief in a Bolshevik menace looms as one reason for the flight. Lieutenant Wade said every member of the American Universities Expedition believes the Bolsheviks plan to beat us in finding the continent we feel assured lies in the uncharted seas above Alaska."

The reason is clear enough, he declared, because "a military base could be established within a day's flying distance of the most important cities of the northern hemisphere."

SENATE WARNED BY MELLON ON ITALIAN DEBT

Washington, Feb. 18 (I.N.S.).—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon delivered an informal warning to the Senate today that if it refuses to ratify the Italian debt agreement the United States stands to lose the money it loaned Italy, amounting to nearly $2,000,000,000.

Plainly perturbed at the indications that the Senate will not ratify the Italian agreement, Secretary Mellon told newspaper men today that, in his opinion, the agreement contains the best terms that can be secured from Italy.

Mellon said he hoped the Senate would study the pact impartially and without political bias and that he believed if this were done the agreement would be ratified.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S MOTHER IS DEAD AT 70

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Mrs. Gilbert B. Mathewson, mother of the late Christy Mathewson of baseball fame and president of the Boston Braves, died today at her home in Factoryville, near here. She was seventy years old. Mrs. Mathewson, who became ill last October, soon after the death of her son, was born at Factoryville, a farming village, and had been president of the W. C. T. U. there for many years. She is survived by her husband and two daughters.

WILL VISIT ALL WEST INDIES

Booked for Passage From New York Saturday With Other Hub Prelates

New York, Feb. 18.—His Eminence Cardinal O'Connell of Boston and several monsignors of the Boston diocese will be passengers on the Royal Mail steamer Ohio, which sails from this city on a West Indian cruise on Saturday, it was learned here today.

It is understood that the ranking American Cardinal will be accompanied by his secretary, the Rt. Rev Mgr. Richard J. Haberlin, D. D., who is also chancellor of the Boston archdiocese, and the Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Splaine, D. D., of Roxbury.

Other Boston prelates on the passenger list of the Ohio are the Rt. Rev. Ambrose F. Roche of Watertown, and the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Arthur T. Connolly, of Jamaica Plain, Mass.

The cruise includes stops at many places of interest, the first being at Nassau, on Tuesday next. A week from Saturday the party is due to arrive at Havana, and three days later at Jamaica.

The rest of the itinerary includes stops at Colon (Panama), Curacao, La Guayra, Trinidad, Barbadoes, Fort of France, St. Pierre, St. Thomas, San Juan, Bermuda, returning to New York on Monday, March 22.

The Ohio carries a large passenger list on the cruise, including several other prominent Bostonians.

MARY PICKFORD'S MOTHER IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, mother of Mary Pickford, who was operated upon for a tumor, was in a critical condition today. Physicians described her condition as "very serious."

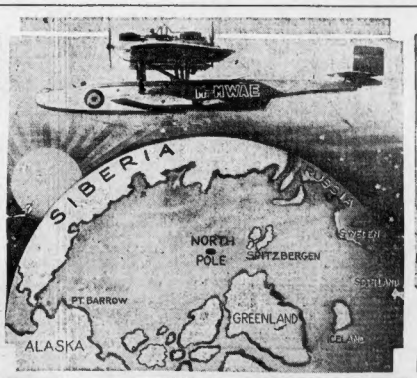
AIR RACE PLANNED TO FOIL SOVIET IN ESTABLISHING BASE ON UNCHARTED POLAR CONTINENT

Lieutenant Leigh Wade, U. S. A., who is to resign to prepare for a Polar airship expedition.

Lieutenant Wade and his fiancee, Miss Adele Astair, meeting after the United States army world flight had been accomplished.

A belief has been growing that there exists between the northern coasts of Alaska and Siberia a body of firm land. Stefansson sought it and failed. This is the goal of Lieutenant Wade. (Photos by I. N. S.)



The airship's the thing, despite the lack of available landing places in the Arctic. And Wade will use airplanes of the most up-to-date pattern when he starts his flight northward some time after Independence Day.

COP TELLS OF AIDING RAIDS ON BOOTLEGS

tion on the part of London that Barden tell Inspector Quigley, a brother of Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley of Chelsea, also a defendant, what was said.

The testimony was given after Barden had testified to a large number of liquor raids, either participated in by him, or carried out with his knowledge.

He said the conversation with London occurred in the courthouse on December 10, 1925.

Barden said London's reason for threatening to testify against Inspector Quigley was because the police official had locked him up on one occasion on a default warrant, forcing London to remain some time in the police station.

Witness denied that Mrs. Bessie Berger, a Chelsea woman, had ever told him she was being given "protection."

The witness testified he caused the woman's store to be raided in December of 1923, that it was raided again January 10, 1925, but that he never warned Mrs. Berger when the police were on the way.

The witness then described other liquor raids which he conducted or assisted in, and told of one case in which the defendant was found not guilty in court and the seized liquor ordered returned to its owner.

On January 18, 1922, Barden said the store of a man named Dorfman at No. 177 Winnisimmet street was raided and liquor seized, but the clerk of court refused to issue a complaint.

William Gillar, of No. 8 Third street, Chelsea, one of the defendants, was forced to default his appearance in Chelsea court in order to be on hand when the rum conspiracy trial opened.

Gillar was arrested last night in Chelsea for operating an automobile without a license, and was ordered to appear today. Apparently having in mind the treatment accorded William J. Wall, another defendant, who was brought into Federal Court on a habeas when he failed to appear, Gillar defaulted in Chelsea and turned up at the rum trial.

Sergt. Barden was questioned in direct examination by Atty. John P. Feeney of the defense counsel.

Q.—Do you remember some testimony about liquor that was in a garage at No. 101 Park street? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see alcohol in a truck in that garage? A.—Yes.

Q.—Refer to your book (diary) and tell us when that was? A.—February 26, 1923.

Q.—Have you any evidence of Jake Kark's personal connection with that? A.—No.

Q.—Tell us what you found there? A.—I seized 125 gallons of whiskey, one gallon of coloring, one hydrometer, one funnel and some whisker glasses.

Q.—Where were these things? A.—In the car.

Q.—Did you know the driver of the car? A.—Yes, Sam Trouchinsky.

Q.—Where was that stuff brought? A.—To the station.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I went to the clerk of court and secured a warrant for the arrest of the driver.

Q.—Was the case tried in court? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you present all the evidence you had in the case? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the outcome of the case? A.—The defendant was found not guilty.

Q.—What did you do with the alcohol? A.—The case came up later in court and it was ordered returned to the owner.

Q.—Did Bessie Berger ever tell you that she was given protection or that she paid money to any officer or any other person? A.—No.

Q.—What raid did you make upon Mrs. Berger's store? A.—I never raided her store.

Q.—Were any raids made upon her store? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you present when any other officers raided her store? A.—Not me.

Q.—Did you ever put that store into court? A.—I caused it to be raided. It was raided in consequence of some information I gave Chief Flinn.

Q.—Was the store raided in 1923? A.—Yes, the latter part of December. It was located at No. 43 Williams street.

DENIES HE WARNED HER.

Q.—Who conducted that raid? A.—Chief Flinn and other police officers, about ten of them.

Q.—Who made application for the search warrant in that case? A.—I assisted.

Q.—Did you ever tell Mrs. Berger that her place was to be raided? A.—No.

Q.—Ever tell her that they were coming? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know a man named Dorfman? A.—Yes, he had a store at No. 177 Winnisimmet street.

Q.—Did you ever raid that store? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the result of that raid? A.—The following was seized: 35 gallons of whiskey, one barrel, in five-gallon cans, 30 pint bottles, 20 half-pint bottles, two one-half-gallon jugs, two pounds of stoppers and one pump.

Q.—What was the result of it? A.—Dorfman was brought into court, pleaded guilty, and was fined $200.

Q.—Raid the store after that? A.—No.

Then Attorney Caro began his direct examination of Witness Barden.

Q.—Did you ever enter a place without a warrant to search for liquor? A.—Yes.

Q.—Under what circumstances? A.—With permission of the owners.

Q.—Did you have occasion to visit the premises of Stanley Studlark? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where? A.—At No. 514½ Broadway, at No. 115 Broadway and at No. 2 Medford street.

Q.—What did you observe at No. 514½ Broadway? A.—It's a store on the first floor of a three-story brick building. I frequently saw people there under the influence of liquor, and I brought that information to the clerk of court and asked for a warrant to search the place.

Q.—Did you have his brother, Harry Studlark, in court? A.—Yes.

Q.—Under what circumstances? A.—From information I received I got a search warrant and went to 2 Medford street, a store, and seized liquor there, brought Harry Studlark into court, where he was found not guilty.

Q.—Do you know of Louis Barlow? A.—Yes, at No. 78 Winnisimmet street.

Q.—Did you have that place under observation? A.—Yes, and in consequence of my investigation on April 20, 1922, I, with a search warrant, raided the store and Barlow was brought into court, found guilty and fined $100.

Q.—Was there another raid there? A.—Yes; on April 13, 1922. As a result of information I gave a man marked money and sent him into several stores on Williams street and Winnisimmet street.

AIDED IN SEVEN RAIDS.

Q.—What happened? A.—The man with the marked money went into Barlow's store, purchased some liquor, and as a result, a man named Morgan was arrested, brought into court, pleaded guilty and was fined $25.

Q.—What other occurrence at the Barlow place did you have any connection with? A.—As the result of a raid on No. 78 Winnisimmet street, a man named Richard O'Brien, whom we found in charge, was arraigned in Chelsea Court and paid a fine of 100.

Q.—How many times as the result of raids in which you participated were the Barlows before the court? A.—Seven times.

Q.—Now, there was some testimony of Louis Zimbel. Was there another instance of a raid that you did not testify to in the examination by Mr. Feeney? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now turn to page 190 on the date of March 7, 1925, and state what you did at No. 144 Arlington street, the place that Zimbel testified to. A.—After watching that place for several days I saw a man go in and then come out with a bag. I opened the bag and saw liquor in it. I went to court and got a warrant on March 7, 1925, after which we seized 8 gallons of whiskey, some bottles and a funnel.

Q.—Who, if anybody, did you put in court? A.—A man named Anselovitz.

Q.—What was the disposition of that case? A.—He was fined $100 and three months in the House of Correction. The latter sentence was suspended. He paid the fine.

Q.—You heard the witness, Percy Friedman, tell about a wharf on Front street. Were you ever at the Metropolitan Garage? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the occasion of your visit? A.—I went there with Officers Smith and Hale of the State police.

Q.—Did you go there concerning the recovery of a stolen automobile? A.—Yes.

REFUTES FRIEDMAN.

Q.—Were you ever at the garage with other police officers when a number of bootleggers were given protection while they were unloading liquor at the wharf? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you ever see Mayor Quigley down on Front street or on Medford street, sitting in a car, as Fried man testified? A.—No sir.

Q.—Some time did you hold a conversation with Jack London concerning Tom Quigley? A.—Yes.

Q.—When was it? A.—December 10, 1925.

Q.—What did he say? A.—It was in Superior Court in the presence of Officer Flynn. He told me that Quigley had taken him in on a default warrant and he said for me to go back and tell Quigley that when he (London) testified in Federal Court he would do a proper job on him and send him away for twenty years.

Dist. Atty. Harold P. Williams then took Barden for cross-examination. He quizzed him in regard to Friedman's story of the alleged unloading of a three-masted schooner.

Q.—How far from the wharf is the Metropolitan garage? A.—About 100 yards. I should say.

Q.—Any reason why a three-masted vessel could not come up to that pier? A.—I can't testify as to that. I don't know.

Q.—Did you ever see a boat there? A.—Yes.

Q.—What kind of a boat? A.—I saw a scow loaded with stone.

Q.—Did you ever see a schooner or tug? A.—No, sir.

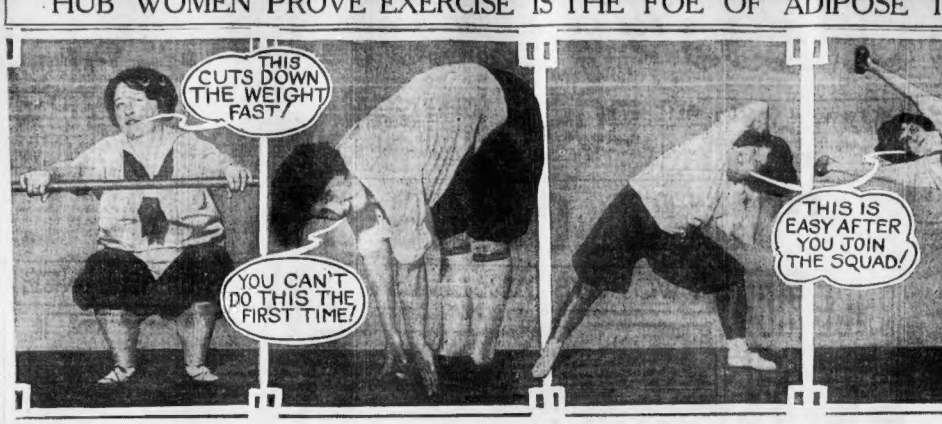
HUB WOMEN PROVE EXERCISE IS THE FOE OF ADIPOSE TISSUE



Specialists say that excess fat is caused by faulty metabolism and exercise is its cure. Above is shown Mrs. C. M. Johnson, member of a health squad sponsored by the Boston Evening American, in reducing exercise.

Hundreds of Boston women are taking advantage of the health building instruction, including lectures by experts, and one of the most faithful of these is Eva De Freyn, shown in a movement which brings grace of form.

Beauty should be the heritage of every woman and health is the foundation of beauty. Sally Healey shows how hips are reduced and health and beauty attained by health squad members who faithfully follow instructions.

Despite her dexterity with dumbbells Eva Meaney is no dumb bell. In fact, she is an exponent of health and grace and shows how chest expansion and suppleness are attained by use of the dumbbells.

GARAGE RUM CASE RESUMES

With one defendant still missing, the trial of five men on liquor violations was resumed in Middlesex Superior Court today.

The defendant who has so far escaped the law, though indicated, is Harry Roth. Simon Adelberg, David and Aaron Hosman of Revere, and Michael J. Muchnikoff, all Cambridge garage owners, are charged with conspiracy to transport and sell liquor.

Lawrence Lavin of Revere is also a defendant, the charge against him being malicious injury to two automobiles.

Special Officer Patrick J. McCarthy of the Cambridge liquor squad on the witness stand told of watching the garage on Brookline street, Cambridge, which the government claims was the centre of the rum-running. He said that cars were driven in and out all during the night by the defendants.

He said that Lavan drove up early in the morning and when the police tried to stop him by barring his way with two automobiles Lavan crashed through both at 45 miles an hour.

Lavan is a government witness.

MISSION OPENS IN CATHEDRAL ON SUNDAY

Oblate Fathers Are to Have Charge of 2 Weeks' Services; Mgr. Kiley to Rome

By JAMES WALSH.

The annual mission for the parish of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross will begin Sunday and continue for two weeks. The first week will be for the women and the second for the men. The mission this year will be given by members of the Oblate Order. The priests include the Rev. Albert McDermott, O. M. I.; the Rev. James B. McCarton, O. M. I.; the Rev. John K. Doherty, O. M. I., and the Rev. Martin E. Norton, O. M. I.

The mission masses during the week for the women will be at 6 and 8 o'clock. During the men's week they will be celebrated at 5:30 and 7 o'clock. The evening services each week will begin at 7:45 and will consist of recitation of the rosary, instruction, sermon and benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

The Rev. Neil A. Cronin, administrator of the Cathedral, announces that lectures on Catholic doctrine will be given during the week of March 21 by the Rev. Martin E. Norton, O. M. I. Non-Catholics are especially invited to these lectures.

Fr. Cronin also announces a special mission program, under the direction of Organist T. Frank Burke during the mission weeks. The soloists will be announced later.

Monsignor Moses E. Kiley, brother of the Rev. Myles Kiley, pastor of St. Anne's Church, Gloucester, who for some years has been head of the Holy Cross Mission House for men in Desplaines street, Chicago, will sail for Rome to assume his new duties as spiritual director of the North American College in the Eternal City on Feb. 27. Mgr. Kiley was brought up in Somerville, studied at St. Laurent College at Montreal, then at St. Mary's, Baltimore, and later at the North American College in Rome. He was ordained at the latter institution in 1911. After his ordination the late Archbishop Quigley of Chicago brought him to the Western metropolis, where he did parish work for five years at St. Agnes' Church.

When Archbishop Mundelein, now a cardinal, assumed charge of the Chicago archdiocese he placed Fr. Kiley in charge of the mission which he will soon leave. Fr. Kiley was made a monsignor when Cardinal Mundelein received the red hat in Rome. For a number of years he has been director of the Associated Catholic Charities Bureau. He led the Chicago Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome.

Missions for St. Cecilia's parish, Back Bay; St. Patrick's parish, Roxbury, and St. John the Evangelist parish, Winthrop, will be conducted in the respective churches, beginning Sunday and continuing for two weeks. The first week in each case will be for the women, the second for men. Each will be conducted by members of the Oblate Order.

The annual musicale of the Alumni Association of Notre Dame Academy, Fenway, will be given Sunday afternoon, March 14, in the auditorium of the academy under the direction of the Vannini Symphony orchestra. An eminent soloist will present several selections.

The annual Lenten conferences at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Harrison avenue and East Concord street, will begin in the upper church next Sunday evening at 7:45. Sermons will be preached by the Rev. Jones L. Corrigan, S. J., professor of social ethics at Boston College. The general subject for the conference is "Modern Social Institutions and the Social Reign of Jesus Christ." The sermon Sunday night will be on "Christ's Reign and Modern Morality." The subjects for the following Sundays are: "Christ's Reign and Modern Marriage," Sunday, February 28; "Christ's Reign and Modern Industry," Sunday, March 7, and "Christ's Reign and Modern Education," Sunday, March 14.

The Confraternity of the Holy Cross will meet tomorrow at 3 o'clock in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. The services will consist of the Way of the Cross followed by Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The 8 o'clock mass in the Cathedral tomorrow morning will be celebrated for the members of the confraternity.

HONOR HERO AS COURT SENDS BROTHER TO JAIL

Biddeford, Me., Feb. 18 (A.P.)—While Joseph Labbe, coast guardsman hero, was being urged today by his fellow townsmen as a deserving recipient of a Carnegie medal, Antonio, his brother, was under sentence to serve two months in jail and pay a fine of $100. Through an ironical twist of circumstances, early reports of the court proceedings in which Antonio figured, named his hero brother as the defendant. This later was corrected. The feat for which Joseph Labbe is being mentioned for heroism occurred at the height of the great blizzard.

After his boat, the C126 had been wrecked on the Rhode Island coast, he walked barefoot twelve hours through snow drifts to get help to five companions.

500 IN NEW STRIKE AS COAL MINES REOPEN

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 18 (A.P.)—Trouble marked the reopening of the anthracite mines here today after nearly six months of idleness.

Five hundred workers, employed by the Pennsylvania Coal Company at the No. 4 shaft at Pittston, went on strike a few minutes after the resumption of operations.

The dispute arose over wage rates, a sore spot in the upper hard coal district for years.

Trouble was also reported at the Woodward mine of the Glen Alden Coal Company, on the West Side, but operations were continued.

A score of company workers were turned back from various operations shortly after the opening of the mines because of the failure of miners to report on their jobs.

PASTOR CHARGES "GRAFT" AT MOVIES HEARING

Rev. John Wriston, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Southbridge, today charged an unnamed selectman of the town with accepting "graft" for favoring Sunday movies.

He was speaking in opposition to a bill under which Southbridge would be allowed to vote on the question of legalizing Sunday motion pictures. Representative Joseph N. O'Kane of Dudley said he filed the bill at the request of the selectmen.

HUB VETS GIVE OVATION TO MITCHELL

Ex-Colonel Warns Lid on the Truth Means "Bankrupt National Defense"

Characterized by James T. Williams, Jr., editor of the Boston Evening American, as "the permanent general of the shock troops of the Air Service," former Colonel William Mitchell was accorded an ovation at the City Club today.

A guest at the luncheon of the Crosscup-Phalon Post, American Legion, the stormy petrel of the Air Service told the war veterans assembled that America will find itself in the same position as a bankrupt corporation if the people continue to be left in the dark regarding national defense.

"There has been no intellectual demobilization in the United States since the war," he said. "This is the only country which calls itself civilized that conducts its national defence so that the people do not know about it."

"INQUISITION" AT WORK.

Mitchell was mild at the luncheon in his address, but in an interview with a Boston Evening American reporter directly afterward, he flayed he "bureaucratic, inquisitorial methods employed by the defence heads."

Commenting on the rebuke administered yesterday to Majors Dargue and Arnold of the Air Service by General Patrick, their chief, Mitchell said:

"Their reprimand is merely an example of the use of inquisitorial methods in an effort to suppress any constructive aircraft criticism. It is the same old stunt, but it won't work.

"Eighty, or even 90, per cent. of the officers in the air service are members of the regular army, navy or reserve, and they have strings upon them which can be pulled at will by the authorities.

HOPES IN PUBLIC.

"The same condition of bureaucratic, inquisitorial methods prevails all over the country. If a man springs anything disagreeable to the authorities, he is immediately pulled away from the danger zone, which is Washington, because he might influence Congress in some way.

"In every branch of the service there is criticism at the present time. In the Air Service this is promptly squashed, but I firmly believe that the people of the United States no longer will permit this suppression of constructive criticism."

In introducing Mitchell at the luncheon, Editor Williams said:

"The regulations of our country are such that no branch of the head servants of the people have a right to dictate the policies of the national defense, but it belongs to the people to speak for themselves, either at the polls or through their representatives in Congress and ask for any kind of air defense they want.

WIFE IS HONORED.

"Testimony such as General Mitchell's should not be used against officers when the time comes to look upon them for promotion."

Mrs. Mitchell accompanied her husband to the luncheon and was accorded the unusual honor of being admitted to the club upstairs, where women usually are barred.

There were also present General Clarence R. Edwards, Brigadier-General John H. Sherburne and Lieutenant Robert J. Brown of the Boston Airport.

Major Carroll Swan was toastmaster.

Bank Girl to Wed

ATTY. WALSH RECEIVES MOZETTE'S CONFESSION

Attorney Joseph P. Walsh of Boston, exonerated by Middlesex County authorities of charges growing out of the conviction of Thomas Mozette, clairvoyant, who died in State Prison, has made public portions of a letter written to him by the prisoner shortly before his death. In this letter Mozette confessed he had lied to the Middlesex Grand Jury and that Attorney Walsh had never received any money from him or communicated with him on any matter.

USE SNOWMOBILE, PUNG TO GET WOMAN TO DOCTOR

Machias, Me., Feb. 18.—Four men with the aid of three horses and a snowmobile, succeeded in getting Mrs. Fanny Sprague to Machias for medical treatment over snow-packed roads from Starboard, sixteen miles away, after she had fallen and broken her arm.

With physicians unable or unwilling to tackle the trip to the woman's snowbound home, neighbors started the task of getting her to them. James Sprague, with his horse and several men, got her as far as Larrabee. There she was turned over to William Wood, who conveyed Mrs. Sprague to Machias port by snowmobile. Elden Palmer, with a pung, took up the burden for two miles, when horses were changed once more and Herbert Palmer finished the trip.

Mrs. Sprague reached here shortly before midnight.

21 DOG TEAMS HOP IN 3-DAY CLASSIC

Quebec, Que., Feb. 18 (A.P.)—Twenty-one dog teams started today on the first lap of the three-day international dog sled derby. Forty-one miles will be covered each day. The first team started at 9 o'clock and was followed by the others at three-minute intervals.

The entries include three previous winners of the rich stakes: The Brown Corporation team, which captured the prize in 1923; Earl Bridges, of The Pas, Man., who won in 1924, and Emile St. Goddard, also of The Pas, who took the prize in 1925.

Star Dog "Chinook," Left Because of Age, Grieves

Wonolocket, N. H., Feb. 18 (A.P.)—Arthur Walden's dog team took off in the international derby at Quebec today, but "Chinook," his lead dog in many races and famous for his endurance, sits in his kennel, moping because his master has decided he is too old for the long grind over the snow.

"Chinook" realizes that his teammates have gone out to test their strength against other huskies, Mrs. Walden said, and he is not at all satisfied. He led his team to victory in the recent two-day meet at Poland Spring, Me., and then, to prove he was not tired out, awoke Mr. Walden when "Koltag," son of "Chinook," got tangled in his chain and was near losing his life.

This same "Koltag" led Walden's team in the race today.

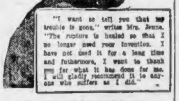
Woman Healed Severe Rupture by New Method

Feels Well As Ever Again After Suffering Years of Pain and Discomfort

You Can Try It Free

After many years of suffering and constant irritation, Mrs. Will Jenne of Coupeville, Wash., has rid herself of rupture by an amazing new discovery. She accomplished it in a safe, sure, comfortable way.



"I want to tell you that my trouble is good," writes Mrs. Jenne. "The rupture is healed so that I no longer need your invention. I have not used it for a long time and feel sure it is cured. I want to thank you for what it has done for me. I will gladly recommend it to any one who suffers as I did."

MRS. WILL JENNE

This grateful letter is but one of thousands which have been received by us.

Constructed along absolutely new lines, this wonderful invention can be washed daily and is as light, as neat and as comfortable that regardless of the body position there is no hampering of body movement. So small and so flat it can not be noted beneath the closest fitting garment. Society people, athletes, and men and women who work hard every day have healed their ruptures in this new way. Physicians everywhere recommend it for children and for infants because of its ease and safety with which it retains the rupture, draws the separated muscle fibres close together and allows the rupture to heal.

Hundreds of men and women who have worn the old fashioned trusses for years without results have discarded wall by this new method. Night and day with equal comfort it holds perfectly and is constantly working for your good.

So sure are we of what it will do we will let you try it free. Write today—do not delay—we will send you the free trial offer in plain, sealed envelope.

BETTER TRANSPORTATION URGED BY J. S. LAWRENCE

Transportation in New England must be improved to attract visitors, representatives of the transportation and hotel interests of this section were told today by John S. Lawrence, president of the New England Council, at a meeting at the Boston City Club.

"Something must be done to lengthen the resort season so that labor may receive more continuous employment and plant costs be reduced by avoidance of peaks and depressions," he said. "While our guests are here, some means might be found to acquaint them with New England products, and thus accelerate the demand for our goods throughout the world.

"Co-operative publicity might be developed in the same manner that has proved successful in other sections of the United States by syndicating photographs and the joint use of moving picture films."

WESTERN AIR MAIL TIED UP BY SNOW AND COLD

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 18 (A.P.)—Snow and cold all but stopped the air mail service between Salt Lake City and Chicago. The westbound mail was held at Chicago. The eastbound mail may not leave Salt Lake and would not proceed east of Rock Springs, Wyo. No height at which mail fliers can get under the clouds to follow the beacon light trail existed, it was said.

GET SKID OUT OF HORSE SHOE AND $1000 IS YOURS!

New York, Feb. 18 (A.P.)—Anyone who can invent a satisfactory non-skid horseshoe will be rewarded with $1,000, the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals announced today. The society said it had examined 600 devices and found them unsatisfactory. The inventor must take into account present-day pavements which are mainly for motor traffic. Sharp-shoeing will not solve the problem. Once a sharp-shoed horse gets off ice and snow it finds itself on stilts and loses its balance, the society says. Besides, the calks soon become rounded, making the shoe positively dangerous.

POLAR FLIGHT HITS SNAG IN HUNTING LICENSE LACK

Juneau, Alaska, Feb. 18 (A.P.)—The Wilkins Trans-Polar expedition met a snag here today when E. P. Walker, Alaskan agent of the biological survey, notified the explorers they must obtain non-resident hunting licenses. Captain George Hubert Wilkins, who is on his way to Fairbanks to assemble his motor planes, had expected to carry only small food supplies and "live off the country" by shooting game. The biological survey ruling may work hardships on the expedition, as the new law limit on game would not permit killing sufficient game for meat supplies over in the open areas.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Mrs. Bayard Thayer of Lancaster Give Dance in Honor of Deb Daughter

SLENDER WHITE LILIES, YELLOW acacias and feathery mimosa, brought in profusion from the Bayard Thayer conservatories at "Hawthorne Hill" in Lancaster, will make the Somerset Hotel's handsome ballroom a thing of wondrous beauty this evening for the debutante dance Mrs. Thayer of Beacon street and Lancaster gives in honor of her lovely bud daughter, Miss Mabel Bayard Thayer.

ALTHOUGH THE DANCE is a "small" affair as debutante balls go, it is, nevertheless, quite the ne plus ultra of functions, carrying as it does the stamp of Boston's choicest circles. The Thayers and their kin have long occupied the social summits and have a wealth of aristocratic tradition and background.

IN ADDITION TO BOSTON'S youthful belles who'll shine resplendent at the dance, Gotham and the City of Brotherly Love have a representation of pretty girls come to town for the occasion. Miss Emily and Miss Edith Woodward, Miss Sally and Miss Virginia Pratt and Miss Cornelia Livingston are of the New York contingent.

THE FIRST NAMED ARE daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward of New York and "The Cloisters," Newport. These young girls are no strangers to Boston's fashionable set, for they have frequently been to town as guests of their aunt on the dwarf side, the distinguished and always beautifully turned out Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames.

MISS SALLY AND Miss Virginia Pratt, daughters of the John T. Pratts of Gotham's inner set, likewise number scores of friends in Boston's Mayfair. Miss Cornelia Livingston is a cousin of the evening's honored bud, and is daughter of the Goodhue Livingstons.

NEW YORK'S QUOTA also includes Miss Evelyn Lyman, and, from Philadelphia, Miss Anna Scott of the notable Scott clan (she is a daughter of Mrs. Edgar Scott) and Miss Beatrice Patterson come up for the all-important festivity. A Baltimore belle, Miss Matilde Manley, is another out-of-town guest.

FOR THE USHER SQUAD a most imposing array of Boston's masculine lights will be on duty—headed by any number of Miss Thayer's relatives. For instance, Eugene V. R. Thayer tops the list, and following in close order are John E. Thayer Jr., Nathaniel Thayer (her brother) and William Dexter (her brother-in-law).

ROBERT WINTHROP AND Frederic Winthrop, Jr., sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Winthrop and cousins of Miss Thayer, are on the roll for usher duty. And continuing this recounting (it might well be a masculine "Who's Who") there are Charles Darlington, George Higginson, Frederick M. Davies and William Burden.

ALSO DUNCAN F. THAYER, son of the John Elliot Thayers of Boston and Lancaster, Robert C. Rand of New York—he is fiance of the bud's elder sister, Miss Ruth Thayer—John L. Saltonstall, Jr., George Peabody Gardner, Jr., Chandler Bigelow and William S. Patten.

B. NASON HAMLIN, Frederick S. Moseley, Jr., Samuel H. Hastowell, James Jackson, Jr., Joseph Warren, Jr., Gardner Emmons, Ernest Iselin, Jr., Henry De Rham Willis P. Beal, Eliot Codman, Columbus Iselin, Nathaniel Saltonstall and Howard Cushing are down for usher duty.

ALSO WEARING the badge [illegible] office will be Robert H. Thayer, James, Otis, Cecil Lyon, Austin [illegible], Frederick L. Bolney, Jr., J. Hampden Robb, Edward Bangs Mack, Richard Grant Hunnewell, Lawrence Lee and J. Lindley Clark, Jr., and Richard Scott.

ROUNDING OUT THIS most notable aggrecation there will be J. Haven Parker, Mortimer Eustis, Richard Trimble, Richard Tucker, Lawrence Coolidge, Harold J. Coolidge, Jr., Percy Musgrave, J. Holland Beal and Charles Raymond. Surely usher duties could not be entrusted to more efficient hands.

OF COURSE, there will be any number of dinners before the dance, four of which already announced have as hostesses Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Mrs. Henry F. Sears and Mrs. William Dexter (the last named was Constance Thayer, a sister of Miss Mabel Thayer).

TOMORROW EVENING'S hockey match at the Arena to benefit the hospital department of Community Service is rolling up an attendance of large proportions which is quite in the order of things considering that Yale and B. A. A. are the contesting teams.

AT SUCH AN affair Young Miss Boston must be on hand in the guise of candy girl or to assist in usher duties. Many such calls come the way of Boston's Smart Younger Set during a busy Winter and never does Milady refuse her assistance and charming presence.

FOR THE HOCKEY benefit, Miss Katharine Cunningham Gray, Miss Helen Thorndike, Miss Alice Sherburne, Miss Margaret Edwards, Miss Elizabeth Gardiner, Miss Ellen Prothingham and Miss Olga Prothingham will be at the Arena.

ALSO MISS SALLY ROBBINS, Miss Elizabeth Brewster and Miss Polly Brewster, Miss Rosalind Pierce, Miss Helen Patch and Miss Charlotte Willey, although quite an aggregation of post debutantes and sub-debutantes. For every reserved seat ticket sold the hospital department of Community Service benefits.

108 FAMED LEVERHULME PAINTINGS BRING $89,980

New York, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—Sale of 108 oil paintings owned by the late Viscount Leverhulme has brought $89,980 at the American Galleries. Furnishings of the Hampstead manor of the late English nobleman brought $640,000. Top price was for Gainsborough's "Portrait of a Young Girl," which brought $20,000. Other paintings sold for $1,000 to $2,750.

MORRIS GEST TO BRING RUSSIAN PLAYERS HERE

Moscow Art Theatre Singing-Actors at Opera House Week of March 15

Through circumstances which have arisen unexpectedly, Boston is to have the unusual opportunity to serve as host to the Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio of Vladimir Nemirovitch-Dantchenko. In recognition of Boston's unprecedented response to his production of "The Miracle," and, in former seasons, of the Art Theatre's Dramatic Company, Morris Gest announces that he has arranged for a limited engagement in this city of the young singing-actors of the world's foremost stage.

This company, which has been the outstanding artistic triumph of the current season in New York, will come here directly following the conclusion of its twelve weeks' season there, and will appear at the Boston Opera House for the week of March 15 only, presenting the most significant plays in its repertory, "Carmencita and the Soldier," the wholly new version of the Merimee-Bizet "Carmen" and Aristophanes' comedy, "Lysistrata." Three popular priced matinees will be played on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio is a lyric offshoot of the dramatic company which played successfully in Boston two or three seasons ago. It is the sole creation of Vladimir Nemirovitch-Dantchenko, who was Constantin Stanislavsky's collaborator in the founding of the Moscow Art Theatre 28 years ago. The same methods of thorough rehearsal, repertory playing scorn for the "star" system and psychological truth which distinguished the parent company have been applied to the lyric daughter.

A committee of patrons is being enlisted in connection with the Boston season, and its members, representing the literary, artistic, musical, social and business life of the city, will be announced in a few days.

WINS RIGHT TO PRACTICE LAW BEFORE GRADUATION

Charles S. Sullivan, Jr., only son of Judge Charles S. Sullivan of the Charlestown Municipal Court, received notice from the bar examiners that he passed the recent examination four months before he was to be graduated from Boston University Law School. He took the examination two months ago.

"Junior" Sullivan was born in Charlestown 23 years ago and was educated in the Warren Grammar School, Boston Latin School, and graduated from St. John's Preparatory School at Danvers in 1922. He the youngest man ever to be president of the Democratic Club of Boston University Law School; a member of the Newman Catholic Club [illegible] Council Knights of Columbus and St. Mary's Hol[illegible] society. He resides with his parents at No. 1 Laurel street.

BEACON STREET MAN OPPOSES TRUCK BAN

Attacks Neighbors and Defends Rights of Masses to Thoroughfare

Beacon street residents who want the thoroughfare closed to trucks from Arlington street to Kenmore station were sharply attacked today at a hearing before the street commissioners at City Hall, by Harry Estabrook, Back Bay rug merchant, who lives in Beacon street himself.

"Closing this street would be rank class legislation," cried Estabrook. "These people want the street closed for bedroom purposes, so they can sleep a little better.

"Beacon street like all other streets belongs to the masses. Why crowd other streets for the benefit of these few people? They have two or more homes, anyway, and only live here a few weeks each year."

The matter was taken under advisement by the Street Commissioners for a decision later.

SURPRISES NEIGHBORS.

Estabrook's outburst, which came as a surprise, since he was recognized by others as a resident of No. 264 Beacon street, was denounced as "outrageous" by former Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan, who appeared for residents west of Massachusetts avenue.

An offer to pay for the service of traffic policemen, including motorcycle officers, if the Police Commissioner would station them in Beacon street to enforce the proposed exclusion of trucks, was made by Alexander Whiteside, who argued for the Beacon Street Associates, an organization of 250 persons living between Arlington street and Massachusetts avenue.

Plans prepared by the street commissioners for the public hearing included also exclusion of trucks on Marlborough street. The ban would be operative for 24 hours daily in place of the present all-night exclusion on part of Beacon street.

ASKS 90 DAYS' TRIAL.

A 90-day trial was urged by Whiteside, who offered also to place checkers to see what detour routes trucks found and report to the commissioners on the best way to divert this traffic.

Attorney Sullivan declared he was not in favor of having residents pay the cost of policing the street, and he told the commissioners to "pay no more attention to automobile men until they change their attitude as regards the public."

City Councillor Henry Parkman, Jr., of No. 183 Beacon street described himself as "one of the downtrodden residents who seek relief."

RETAIL FOOD PRICES REDUCED 1 PER CENT.

Washington, Feb. 18 (A.P.)—Retail food prices declined almost 1 per cent. during the month ending January 15, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today, while wholesale prices for 404 commodities during January were virtually unchanged from the December levels. Since January 15 of 1925, however, retail prices have increased nearly 6½ per cent., the bureau said, and 67 per cent. since January, 1913.

SARGENT GIVES UP ALUMINUM CO. PROBE

Lacks Evidence of Contempt, Says Cummins in Senate Report

Washington, Feb. 18 (A.P.)—After full investigation, the Department of Justice has reached the conclusion that contempt proceedings against the Aluminum Company of America cannot by any possibility be successfully maintained.

The announcement was made today by Chairman Cummins of the Senate Judiciary Committee, in a minority report opposing the Senate investigation as to whether the Aluminum Company, in which Secretary Mellon is a large stockholder has violated Federal Court decree of 1912.

Senator Cummins said the department was "in possession of all the information known or believed to exist, including not only everything that was available to the Federal Trade Commission, but also many items of information not submitted to the commission."

KIP RHINELANDER WILL STAY IN THE SOUTH

New York, Feb. 18 (I.N.S.).—Stony silence from his family greeted reports today that Leonard Kip Rhinelander was expected "home" by Beatrice Jones Rhinelander, his colored wife. "Kip" is at a Southern resort, it was stated. He will be kept away from New York and the only communication likely will be the monthly payments of $300 alimony. Mrs. Rhinelander's lawyer on Saturday will file a brief in Supreme Court in support of her contention that the jury's verdict in her favor in the annulment suit was proper. This verdict is the object of attack by Rhinelander's lawyers.

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

'BANANA' TENOR AT WNAC

Local fans tonight will have the opportunity to hear Mr. Antonio Lanasa, tenor, in a short program from Station WNAC. Mr. Lanasa hails from the city of Baltimore, and has for some months been the head of the Lanasa Troup, a group of entertainers which has travelled over the entire eastern part of the country. Lanasa has broadcast through all the principal eastern stations, including the WEAF-WCAP chain.

Perhaps his greatest claim to distinction is the fact that only a few short years ago he was peddling bananas on the streets of Baltimore. The story is told that on one occasion while he was hawking his wares from house to house, one of his customers suddenly came to the realization that this young man had a remarkable singing voice.

He was accordingly called in and told that a man with his remarkable gift had no business peddling bananas. This was enough for Antonio. He closed out his hitherto remunerative business, and immediately embarked upon the somewhat uncertain career of an artist.

Lanasa shortly intends to go to Europe, where he will finish studying under famous operatic teachers.

REISMAN OVER WBZ TONIGHT

Leo Reisman and his orchestra will take the radio audience for another trip through music land in their regular Thursday evening concert from WBZ at 8 o'clock tonight. For these weekly concerts Leo Reisman has selected instruments particularly with regard to their broadcasting qualities in making up his concert organization, and the music is also carefully chosen.

At nine o'clock the Philharmonic trio and J. Malcolm Warren, tenor, will be heard in a program of an interesting and varied nature.

Prof. Charles A. Wilson, director of the New Haven Institute of Music in Malden, has arranged a concert program which will be presented this evening from WBZ at 9:30 p. m. He will have the assistance of Nina Mae Ford, soprano, and Edith Wilkins, violinist.

W. F. DODGE'S ORCHESTRA AT WNAC TONIGHT

The WNAC Concert Orchestra, under the direction of William F. Dodge, will be presented for its second concert of a series by the American Storage Battery Company, the program being broadcast on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock by Station WNAC.

Strube's "Cruiser Harvard" opens the program, which includes such concert selections as Dvorak's "Largo," two selections by Densmore and excerpts from Victor Herbert's "Fortune Teller." Mr. Dodge has again included two violin solos, which he plays at the request of many radio listeners.

For the Notebook

Reverse the leads on the grid coil if signals are mushy and stations hard to get.

Use good insulators and solder all connections in the aerial for best results.

Thirty ampere hour capacity means that if one ampere is drawn from a cell every hour it will last thirty hours.

To eliminate low-frequency noises in audio amplifiers shunt a .1 megohm grid leak across the secondary of the transformer.

If desiring to shield a panel as a body-capacity eliminator, use aluminum coats of aluminum or bronze paint instead of sheets of metal.

A loop antenna is supposed to intercept maximum signal strength when it is pointed toward the transmitter, but this directional property is affected by the surroundings.

Round out the tone and cut down static noises by hooking a fixed condenser across the loudspeaker terminals. Proper capacity of condenser can be determined by experimentation.

Use Flux Carefully

Never let soldering flux get on the terminals of the telephone jack. As soon as this material gets hot it will run through the fiber insulation and cause leakages at this point.

Radio Queries

Q.—W. T., Pascoag, R. I. I have a Chelsea Super 8 set. The tubes are Hytron 301-A type. The B batteries are 45 volt Winard. I get a station loud once in a while but cannot get distance. My storage battery only lasts about 20 hours. This is my third Chelsea and I get no better results on either of the others. I have a 100-foot aerial 30 feet high, and it stands all alone in a lot with no interference. There are 12 Chelsea sets in this town and all have this same trouble. Do you think it is the radio or the tubes or battery? Can you tell me if they have had much trouble with the Chelsea set?

A.—Your trouble lies either in the fact that your tubes draw an abnormal amount of current, or that your storage battery is not of sufficient capacity. Of the two, I would suspect your storage battery first. Quite a few "bargain" batteries have been put on the market which are built into large cabinets, but do not have many plates inside the case. It may be possible that you have such a battery. The best way of finding out is to take it to a reliable battery man and have him give it a discharge test. There is nothing wrong with your receiver. I have not heard any complaints such as yours regarding the Chelsea set. On the other hand, this machine has been praised extensively by fans writing in to this column.

What Has Happened to Radio?

It is generally agreed that this has been the worst radio season in the history of broadcasting. Hundreds of thousands of disappointed radio fans have been showering newspapers and magazines throughout the country with inquiries as to "Why can't I get long distance?"

The recent trans-Atlantic test showed that reception from the East and West was practically impossible, whereas stations North and South were brought in with amazing volume. Proof of this lies in the extraordinary reception obtained during the Boston Evening American International Radio Tests, when station LOT in Buenos Aires was consistently received with loud speaker volume.

Many explanations have been offered by scientists, although admittedly with considerable hesitancy. One of these has to do with the prevalence of sun spots which are unusually numerous at the present time. Another has to do with the present activity of the Aurora Borealis, and still another, somewhat humorously, brings up the idea that the excessive amount of soft coal soot saturating the air has had something to do with radio conditions.

It has been noticed by engineers that the present poor conditions are only noticeable on wave lengths below 2,000 meters. Waves higher than this point have not been affected, and men in charge of high powered long wave stations report that reception has never been better.

Probably the most interesting statement regarding poor radio conditions has had to do with the existence of a mysterious moving "beam" which travels over the earth very slowly, changing its position about once every three months. During the movement of this "beam" all radio stations in its path seem to have excellent receiving conditions. This "beam" at the present time apparently runs from North to South.

Whatever it is, let us hope that this mysterious secret will not be hidden forever. Great minds will be put to work on the matter. There is too much at stake to let it pass without investigation.

DX Conditions Last Night

It was a good night. The static was more or less noticeable, but not enough to interfere with distance reception from stations as far west as the Mississippi River. One of them was WSM, Nashville, Tenn. Code interference on 606 meter channels was bothersome.

ANOTHER LINE RECOGNIZES BOSTON PORT

That New England is being recognized by the trans-Atlantic steamship lines is evidenced by the fact that the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, one of the oldest British steamship organizations, and now the largest shipping combine in the world, will, beginning March 27, inaugurate regular sailings from Boston with the S. S. Ohio, its largest and newest steamer.

Special interest is attached to the Royal Mail's establishment of this service, because of the fact that one of its subsidiary lines, the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, whose ships ply to South American ports, was founded by a Massachusetts man—William Wheelwright of Newburyport. Through his efforts in 1840 the first steamship service between England and South America was started, but not until after a proposal to inaugurate a similar service from American ports had been rejected.

'BRAD' CUSHING BACK IN HUB

Bradbury F. Cushing returns to Boston after an absence of more than 20 years, to take charge of the new Hotel Kenmore.

Mr. Cushing has had long experience in every department of hotel operation and management—having been connected with the hotel business practically his entire career. His first experience was as bell boy in a Summer hotel in Maine, immediately on leaving school. And from that first step he has risen through every phase of hotel life.

After five years' association with the Hotel Vendome, he became connected with the Ricker interests in 1905 as manager of the Poland Spring House in Maine. In 1910 he went to the Pine Grove Springs Hotel and Lake Spofford Club properties at Lake Spofford, N. H., and several years later became treasurer and general manager of the company, continuing in that capacity for more than 15 years. During the Winter he managed hotels in Southern California and Florida.

SALTAIR BEACH TO BE REBUILT

Saltair Beach—the world famous resort on Great Salt Lake, which was partially destroyed by fire in April, 1925, is to be rebuilt at once and will be ready for the regular opening date, May 29, 1926.

The new resort will be thoroughly modern and complete in every detail and will provide every facility heretofore offered, as well as many added attractions.

Upwards of half a million dollars will be expended in rebuilding this noted resort.

About 900 traffic men representing the railroads, steamships and industries of New England and other parts of the United States have for several days been gathering at the Copley Plaza hotel where tonight the fifteenth annual banquet of the Traffic Club of New England will be held at 6:30 p. m. in the ballroom. The principal speaker will be E. R. Oliver, vice-president, in charge of traffic of the Southern Railway.

MOTORSHIP TO CALL AT HUB

The "Gripsholm" is the first motor-driven passenger vessel to be placed in trans-Atlantic service and embodies many remarkable and novel examples of the ship builder's craft. In her construction is included every latest improvement both as to motive power and passenger accommodation.

The "Gripsholm" is powered with two new design double-acting six cylinder Diesel engines—the largest Diesel engines ever built—developing 18,300 ind. horsepower and propelling the ship at an average speed of over 17 knots, which enables her to do the distance between New York and Gothenburg in eight days or less. There are six passenger decks, and accommodation is provided for 222 first-class, 252 second cabin and 1,062 third cabin passengers.

A unique feature of the "Gripsholm" is her funnels. Though these are not required on a motored ship, the traveling public is so used to ships with large funnels that one has been equipped with two. These, however, are not merely ornamental but serve useful purposes, one is used for the engine exhaust and ventilation and in the other is installed an elevator.

On Friday, April 30, this wonderful motor ship will call at Boston to take on passengers and all give old-timers interested in modern ocean progress an opportunity to see the latest development in trans-Atlantic shipbuilding.

PARK ST. 'SARDINE CLUB' WOULD WELCOME THIS

New York, Feb. 18 (A.P.).—The rush hour crowd jammed into subways at rush hours saw possible relief today when Dr. Louis I. Harris, health commissioner, announced he was studying the possibility of the "stagger" system.

This practice, which was instituted for a few weeks in 1918 to lessen crowding during the influenza epidemic, consisted of allotting to stores, theatres and schools, different hours for opening and closing, thus distributing the crowds over a number of hours on a transit system.

Among the Bostonians aboard were Mr. and Mrs. George C. Brayley, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Williams, Miss J. B. Williams, Miss Royda Coates, Miss Elizabeth Stone, Dr. A. H. Mandell and Edward Shepard.

30 OLD-TIME DANCE HELD TONIGHT

Tickets for Evening American's Affair on Sale at Ballroom

THE TIME: Tonight at 8 o'clock.
THE PLACE: Strand Ballroom, No. 117 Huntington avenue.
THE PRICE: Fifty cents per person.
THE OBJECT: Charity and a real good time.

It's the third old-time dance of the Boston Evening American, of course, brought about by popular demand.

From all indications, one of which has been the advance sale of tickets, the throng tonight is determined to allow no possibility of a slip-up to block their attendance.

They need have no fear, however, for a block of tickets has been saved out to be sold at the door. The advice is to get your ticket early, not withstanding, for the block is not a big one.

From Lakeport, N. H., came a letter today from Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Davis of No. 183 Mechanic street who will be remembered as the couple who started for the first dance and became stalled in their car, but took no chances on missing the second dance and paid out $24 to come to Boston by train.

"If it is possible, wrote the couple, "we will be there on Thursday and hope we can bring back one of those cups to Lakeport.

"By attending the dance it means an outlay of almost a week's pay besides losing a day and a half from the week to come. However, it is not so much the problem of the outlay involved, but the enjoyment it brings to us."

That's what Mr. and Mrs. Davis think of these dances featuring the old-time dances brought back into favor by Henry Ford—the polka, the Virginia reel, the Kaydeedo, the galop, Portland fancy, schottische, mazurka, distesse and the two-step.

There will be two contests tonight remember, the prize waltz and the old-time fiddling contest, with both open to everybody except the first place winners of the previous contests.

Better get here tonight!

SKS GAS TAX AND CUT IN REGISTRATION

A tax of two cents a gallon on gasoline and a reduction of from one-third to two-thirds in the present registration fees of motor vehicles were urged by Representative Langdon Proctor of Littleton at a hearing held before a committee of the Legislature.

He proposed that the fee for cars of 30 horsepower be set at a flat rate of $5 and all over that at $10. The change in registration fees and the tax, he said, would bring the revenue from motor vehicles to [illegible] $8,000,000, he estimated a little more than the sum the present fees are bringing in.

BODY OF MAN KILLED IN LONDON DUE HERE SUNDAY

The body of William Keene who died as a result of a fall down a flight of stairs in the Hotel Belvedere, Leicester, England, will arrive in Boston Sunday aboard the Cunarder Cassandra. Mr. Keene who was London representative for the Armour Leather Company of Boston had returned to his hotel after dining when he died mysteriously. His mother resides in Stoneham where burial will take place. The Cassandra [illegible] and 111 third class passengers for Boston in addition to 167 sacks of British mail. After discharging here she will steam to New York to debark eighty-five cabin and 117 third class passengers and a cargo.

Miss Mary C. Mellyn, assistant superintendent of Boston schools, has come out in favor of equal pay for men and women teachers when equal work is performed.

ICE SO FLIMSY SKATING TEST IS DELAYED

Boston American Event to Be Run in Arena to Bar Postponements

Touch tick, skaters!

The big tourney scheduled for Franklin Field Saturday is off.

The park department made its decision today. There is altogether too much snow piled on top of the ice if indeed there is ice beneath the fleecy mantle.

So the eliminations in the Boston American's Gold and Silver Skate Jubilee Races are postponed to a date which will be announced later. And there will be no postponement that time, for the races will be run in the Boston Arena.

The eliminations which were to have taken place saturday were for skaters from Dorchester, South Boston and East Boston.

All skaters should watch the Boston Evening American daily for announcement of the date of the races in the Arena.

What Doctors Say About This Quick Efficient Tonic

"I have been using Gude's Pepto-Mangan in my practice for 10 years or more with the best results. I have found it the best form of iron I have ever used. The weakest or most irritable stomach bears it perfectly."

"Pepto-Mangan has proven of value in my hands on numerous occasions."

"Have used Gude's Pepto-Mangan with much benefit as a tonic."

"Find Gude's Pepto-Mangan most excellent. Prescribe it almost exclusively."

"I get excellent results from Gude's Pepto-Mangan in both the tablet and liquid forms in my own family and in all cases where they are indicated."

These are only a few of numerous letters from physicians all over the country. For over 33 years Gude's Pepto-Mangan has been prescribed as a quick and efficient tonic by hundreds of doctors, and they KNOW. They are not deceived by the marvelous claims of so many unscientific preparations. They know the value of the iron, manganese and pre-digested albumin in Gude's Pepto-Mangan.

Prescribe Gude's Pepto-Mangan for yourself TODAY and watch the results. Your druggist has it in both liquid and tablet form.

A Live Serial of Love and Temptation Right Here In Boston

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty sisters, the daughters of a widowed mother. They work for Dexter & Co., big Congress street bond firm.

Mary Rose is secretary to the sales-manager, JOHN MANNERS, and is in love with him. But he's engaged to DORIS HINIG, an heiress. Because of her feeling for him, Mary Rose repeatedly refuses to marry DR. TOM FITZROY.

Flossie, a born vamp, carries on a flirtation with the head of the concern, HILARY DEXTER, although she's going to marry his secretary, SAM JESSUP.

John Manners falls in love with Mary Rose, as he never has been in love before in his life, and tells her so.

She looked down at the gray face on the pillows and saw that Tom was watching her with great peace.

That night the sisters have a quarrel, and to "get even" with Mary Rose, Flossie tells John that Mary Rose is "just stringing him along" and really intends to marry Dr. Tom. Manners believes the lie, and Mary Rose is so hurt by his coldness that she decides to leave Dexter's.

One night Dexter goes too far in his love-making, and Flossie learns how little respect a married man has for the girl he professes to love. She walks home from a joy-ride with him, and the next day she elopes with the faithful Sam. From the very beginning of the honeymoon the pair quarrel over money, and she keeps threatening to go back to work for Dexter.

Mary Rose quits her job, and goes to work for a steel man, JIM MORRELL, whose wife is madly jealous of him and spies on him and Mary Rose constantly. She advises Morrell to get a man for a secretary!

Sam finds the jewels that Dexter had given Flossie before her marriage. He and Flossie have a battle, and he leaves Dexter to go to work for Morrell.

One night Tom Fitzroy is terribly hurt in an automobile wreck and Mary Rose goes to the hospital to find him dying. He wants to marry her, and she says she will.

(Now Go on With the Story)

CHAPTER LX.

(Copyright, 1925, Johnson Features, Inc.

THE rest of that black Winter night always stood out in Mary Rose Middleton's mind like a weird and terrible dream. A hideous nightmare.

The wild howling of the wind outside was part of it, and the beating of the savage storm against the windows of the hallway where she sat. So was the sickening medicinal smell of the hospital.

She remembered afterward how Ito, the Fitzroys' Japanese chauffeur, had come up to speak to her, grinning to hide his grief. Fifteen years before it had been he who had taught young Tom to drive

"Bad night—very rainy," he said. "I think poor Mr. Tom—he skid into other car. Man in other car not hurt—poor Mr. Tom's neck broken! You see poor Mr. Tom's car all smashed down at corner of your street, eh!"

And it was not until then that Mary Rose realized that one of the wrecked cars she had passed on her way to the City Hospital was the one in which she and Tom had raced with the wind so many, many times!

Slow tears rolled down her white cheeks, as she remembered how he had looked behind the driving wheel of that car, his head up—"Like him now,' his red hair blown straight back, and his blue eyes narrowed as he guided the car over the roads of the open country, with her at his side.

Strong and laughing and brave with youth he had been—that was to crushed and broken now. She got up and tiptoed into the room where he lay.

Tom's Prophecy

"We aren't giving him any more morphine for a while," Miss Sims whispered to her. "The minister'll be here, soon. Dr. Tom's father seems to think it'll make him happy to know you're married to him . . . don't know—I don't believe much in these deathbed marriages, myself."

The door opened and Tom's father came in.

"Don't you want your mother

R.I. 'STRONG MAN' DIES IN STUNT

Woman Held Following the Drowning of Companion in Early Morning Party

Providence, Feb. 18 (A.P.)—"Showing off" his athletic prowess for a woman he was escorting home in Woonsocket at about 5:20 a. m. today cost Henry Giguere, 28, his life in the trench of the Nourse Mill of the Manville Jenkes Company

Mrs. Flodili Maase, the woman for whom he performed his fatal stunt, is being held by the Woonsocket police on a statutory charge. William J. De Guerre, with them at the time, was released after questioning

Giguere and the woman met De Guerre in a restaurant and the trio started for the woman's home When they came to the mill trench De Guerre and the woman say Giguere, boasting of his strength, mounted a tower and crossed the trench on a runway to another tower on the other side. From the latter tower he swung into a tree, from which he fell to the ground and rolled in to the trench.

De Guerre says he ran to a nearby office quite a distance away, and telephoned the police. He returned with another man but found no trace of Giguere, whose hat was found this forenoon, about half a mile down the stream.

Police are dragging for the body today. Giguere leaves a widow. He had been employed by a Providence detective agency about six months and formerly had appeared as a "strong man" in vaudeville

NICOLAI ACCUSED OF PLOT TO OVERTHROW GERMANY

Berlin, Feb 18—A nation wide plot to overthrow the Republic is being laid by Colonel Nicolai, who was chief of the German military secret service in the World War, an article in Vorwaerts, signed by former Chancellor Scheidemann, said today. Scheidemann charges that Nicolai and Herr Hugenburg, prominent industrialist, were paving the way to the overthrow of the Republic by spreading anti Republican propaganda The article decared persons of high rank were involved as liason officers of the "Black Reichswher," which constitutes Germany's illegal military body.

Aida! Go Home

Aida Copeland, 18, daughter of Mr and Mrs. John M. Copeland, of No. 18 Maple avenue, vanished mysteriously when she left home Sunday afternoon, saying she was going to visit friends. She is a blonde, 5 feet 6 inches in height, and weighing 175 pounds. Police are aiding in a search for her.

ARTISTS CHASE GLOOM AT VET HOSPITAL

Although many years have passed since they took part in "the big parade" scores of ex service men are still fighting to regain health in the United States Veterans' Hospital, West Roxbury.

One of the means of putting them back on their feet is through whole some entertainment. Realizing this the Boston Evening American began another series of entertainments today for the boys still interned at the West Roxbury hospital These shows will be conducted bi-weekly

The talent for today's show was contributed by the DeWitt Entertainment Service, No 727a Boylston street, through its genial manager Bert A. Spears, who did such yeoman service for the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund in recent years.

Among the artists on today's program are Gus Cappuccio, one of New England's most talented violinists, her sister, Dora Cappuccio who handles an accordian in his most artistic manner; Jane Lee, who sings, dances and plays the "uke," and Walter Keylor a fine maker of the best type, who has thousands of friends made via radio

Through courtesy of Town Taxi Inc., the artists were conveyed to and from the hospital without cost

FOUR-STORY BUILDING IN RUINS

Several Families Burned Out and Business Section Menaced

Burlington, Vt., Feb 18—Firemen scaled the front wall of a building and carried a family of seven down ladders to the street today, while several other families fled down fire escapes, as fire partially destroyed a four-story block on Church street in the business centre of the city.

[illegible] in the 3rd floor of Mr. and Mrs. George Komis that the firemen saved from the burning. Mrs. Komis and two children were rescued by firemen, as she was about to give in desperation to the fire from a window ledge

Dr. Carl L. Griffin, a dentist, who had an office in the building and also lived there, was badly burned and was taken to a hospital after he made his escape with the help of other occupants.

The flames gained considerable headway before being discovered and several nearby buildings were threatened. The structure was of wood with brick walls, which helped to check the fire from spreading.

The cause was undetermined. The flames ate their way up from the basement, through a group of stores on the street floor and offices on the second story, into the living quarters on the floors above.

CHARGES AGAINST UNWED MOTHER DROPPED

Oldtown, Feb. 18.—"For the sake of the child," city solons announced here, they would not prosecute the 22 yearold unmarried girl, who abandoned her infant son on a neighbor's veranda during last Sunday night's blinding snowstorm and for the same reason they would not make public the name of the babe's father, who happens to be a wealthy resident of this city with a respectable family.

Publicity would ruin the future of the baby boy and it now stands a chance to meet life with reserve forces because it has been adopted by a prominent family of this city, the authorities explained.

MEXICO CLOSES MORE CATHOLIC INSTITUTIONS

Mexico City, Feb. 18 (A.P.)—The government is continuing to close the Catholic schools in enforcement of the religious clauses of the Constitution, which provide that no schools may be conducted by foreigners. Five schools have been closed at Guadalupe Hidalgo and all private schools have been closed at Tacuba.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

RESTRICTED UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE

by Marie Queen of Roumania

PRODIGAL SONS A FACE FOR EVERY FATE

"A QUEEN must have a face for every fate."

These words occur in my book, "Crowned Queens," which I have just finished writing. How little I foresaw that before the New Year, with all its hope and promise, had become old, I myself should have to live my own words! And in a way which calls for greater strength than any I have needed until now

I refer to the cruel blow dealt to me by our son Carol's renunciation of his rights as Crown Prince, his inheritance of Rumania's throne, for no reason except to escape responsibility and live where, how and with whom he pleases.

It is cruelly difficult for me to "have a face" for this fate. I may not hide my face with its sadness and tears, from the gaze of the world. Those in high places must share their joys and griefs, too, alas, with a vast and not always sympathetic public.

All may gloat over our struggles, humiliations and defeats, pry into them, speculate upon their causes and results, make them a hundredfold harder to bear because of comment upon them and because there are always some cruel ones who appreciate the opportunity to turn the knife in a wound. Our misfortune is caught hold of and torn about, as quarrelling dogs tear to pieces a rag

Grief sits with me and holds my hand and stalks beside me wherever I go. I am trying to bear it sturdily, simply, without fuss. I find myself wondering how others would bear this grief of mine? How would you? Do the voices of persons about you hurt and hurt? Do you seem to see a reflection of your sorrow in eyes that look at you, in hands stretched out to you, in the very clouds that sail over your head?

But even were the griefs of little ones As great as those of great ones, yet this grief is added to the griefs the great must bear! That however much they may desire Silence, they cannot weep behind a cloud—

This is why I speak to you all thus openly. We who belong to the world may not weep behind a cloud

Despite all our teaching, all our loving, despite the years of showing him that no man has the right of freedom when it robs others of freedom, that there is honor in restraint and self-denial, and that no human being—certainly no prince—can be without duties, our boy has gone.

He has sold his birthright, but every mother will understand that all my life is now but one long waiting for him to come back to our hearts.

3D ARREST IN RUM SLAYING

Pawtucket, Feb. 18.—The third arrest in connection with the slaying of Joseph P. Casey in a battle between hijackers and bootleggers Sunday night was made today when William Reilly of this city was taken into custody on a charge of conspiring to violate the prohibition law.

Reilly pleaded noto guilty and was held in $1,000 for a hearing. While he was being arraigned police were continuing their probe of the shooting although seriously hampered by the difficulty of getting information from members of rum running gangs who alone have knowledge of details of the affair

HEAD CRUSHED IN ELEVATOR

Louis Oxfold of No. 2 Dale street, Roxbury, is dying at the Haymarket Relief Station after being crushed in the elevator at the Carney Building, Fremont street, where he was employed

Oxfold had been taking barrels up in the elevator from the subbasement to the basement. His head was caught between the wall of the elevator and the guard rail. He was found unconscious by William J. Fleavy and hurried to the relief station.

There the patrolmen held out little hope for his life as his head was badly crushed and he further suffered internal injuries

PUPILS FILL IRONSIDES COFFERS

First 3 of 350 Hub Schools Report $140; 127,000 Chip in Donations

From the 127,000 pupils in Boston schools today cash poured into the "Old Ironsides" fund—a total contribution of $140 for the day being reported by just three of the schools.

These first three of the 350 schools observing 'Old Ironsides' day to make report were the English High School with $70, Girls' High School with $28 and St. Catherine's Parochial School, Charlestown, with $12

The total amount contributed today by children in all 350 schools may not be known before Saturday. Patriotic exercises, centering around the famous old frigate, were held in the 350 public schools of the city throughout the day and came to a climax with the presentation of contributions of money from the children.

These cash offerings will be turned over to the national "Save Old Ironsides" committee for the rebuilding of the famous old warship now resting at a Boston navy yard pier. Every child gave something if only a penny

PATRIOTIC ADDRESSES.

The exercises in all schools included interior addresses by prominent men and women, reading of essays and poems on "Old Ironsides" by the pupils and presentation of four-color prints of the old ship under full sail. Many of the speakers were members of Boston Lodge of Elks, supplied through James R. Flanagan and Joseph N Shafer of the local organization

Exercises of a similar nature will be conducted in all the parochial schools tomorrow

Because of the rules of the Boston School Committee, none of the public school children were permitted to compete for bronze and silver medals offered by Commander Marion Eppley, U. S N

SUBMIT ESSAYS.

Some of the parochial school pupils who submitted essays that make them eligible for medals are the following: Mary G Colleran, No. 309 D street South Boston, pupil at SS Peter and Paul's High School; William Callaghan, Grade 8, St. John's School, Roxbury; Mary Hunt, third year SS Peter and Paul's High School, South Boston; John Dornes, Grade 8 St Francis de Sales School, Roxbury; Thomas J Connaughton, St Thomas School, Jamaica Plain; Mary M Gorman No 112 Wardwell street South Boston, fourth year, SS Peter and Paul's High School; John J. Hurld, Grade 8, St. Augustine's School, South Boston; Mary Hurley, Fifton High School, East Boston, and Anna Dempsey, No 435 Fourth street, South Boston, St. Augustine's High School, South Boston.

Other pupils whose essays or poems were sufficiently good to make them eligible for a medal are Ruth McO'Connell, Lady of Lourdes School, Jamaica Plain; Francis Sul-

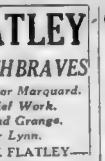
LIFE'S GREATEST PESTS — WHO PUTS GUM IN HIS HAIR?!

FLATLEY WITH BRAVES

Mogridge for Marquard. To Do Relief Work. Barrows and Grange. Players for Lynn.

—By NICK FLATLEY—

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—George Mogridge, the new Brave was attached to the pay-roll to-day by Manager Rube Marquard, who retired from large league pitching to become Providence manager. The venerable southpaw, who was one of the World Series heroes, was collected by Manager Barney to do finishing up work and now and then chuck a full game, if able.



This information comes from Jack Flatley President Judge Fuchs, who arranged the transaction with Barney over the Florida wire. George was passed up by all the American Leaguers. But the Braves believe his stuff, strange in the National League, will be effective for at least a season.

GEORGE and Rosy Ryan will start off as relief pitchers. The old lefthander and the young right-hander are expected to furnish enough pitching to be able to quell enemies who threaten last-minute rallies. Mogridge won five games and lost four in the American League last year, and in an entirely new circuit may have better luck.

He's thirty-six years old or something like that, but the veterans are grabbing just as much spotlight as the youngsters in modern baseball. A club with a flock of young pitchers, such as the Braves have, can afford to carry an old timer or two. The cagey grasptus can always slide by for an inning or so, when youth tires or gets excited.

PROFESSIONAL football is expected to be a large success in New York next Fall. We gather as much from Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yanks, who leased their stadium to Red Grange and company for the next five football years. Ed, who used to manage the Red Sox, tells us that Red is a mighty keen business man now, and that his plans for the future look mighty sound.

Reds team will have to buck the New York Giants. But as the village is devoted to here worship, that may just be tough for the Giants. It's a cinch that Grange and his managers showed Barrows some real money, for the B. M. is quite a hard headed dealer. He likes the outlook, and that means much.

GEORGE STALLINGS, former baseball czar of Detroit, is taking his Rochester pitchers and catchers down to the Stallings plantation in Macon for Spring training. George is a gentleman farmer on a large and successful scale, as well as a baseball power.

He has several hundred acres, so is comfortably situated to handle his peach crop and his ivory crop at one and the same time. He thinks that Hennery Gowdy is going to make quite a manager for Columbus, and admits that major league owners are crazy to let a catcher as good as Hank get out of the big leagues.

"GOWDY," says George, who once tossed Hank when he was batting fences for the Braves, "is better today than nine out of the ten big league catchers. He was a whale of a hitter last year, and his arm will always be a rifle.

"He ain't fast on his pins, but mighty few catchers are. Two seasons of daily squatting back of the bat will kill the muscles in any man's legs.

"Gowdy can get along without speed if he's got the kind of baseball sense that Gowdy has. If I owned a big league club I'd surely bail Hank back from any catchers we could get."

THE Braves, we have discovered, will turn over a flock of ambitious youngsters to the Lynn Club of the new New England League. The Tribe had applications from twenty young men, all well recommended this spring. Those with experience are coming along to Florida. The others will be tried out at Lynn or Providence.

This, for a starter, should make that Lynn club quite a factor in the Davidson circuit. A winning club will mean money, down at the end of the Narrow Gauge.

The iron man got wise to Moe's tip and killed the price, but cashing a small ticket is better than tearing up a long shot ducat. Today the shrimp plunger is taking a poke at Leatherwood in the second which Teddy Walsh is going to embalm if it doesn't cop. Sugar in kick $2591.17.

Knickerbockers in Trim for Tilt and Determined to Retain League Roof

There should be enough action in the fray Marquette-Knickerbocker game at the Boston Arena this evening to satisfy the wildest followers of the great Winter sport.

The Pere Marquette sextet has given the Knickerbockers some fine workings this season. Now that the New Yorker are at the top of the league standing and the "Peres" but a point in the rear both outfits are determined to win tonight.

Pere Marquette have been going well since the early weeks of the season. The team looked weak for a while but Jack Culhane and Bill Letson started to pep and just about made he "Caseys."

Sonny Foley, Jack Culhane and Stuart Nelson are playing as fast a game has any trio of forwards in the league.

Len Morrissey is the one player on the Pere Marquette team that he Knickerbockers pay especial attention to. He has clipped through them at will this season and they are out to stop him, if possible.

The Knickerbockers fell before B. A. A. last Sunday night, but they will be back in trim this evening. Red Smith with the new wing man, has strengthened the New Yorkers' attack. He started against the B. A. A., and Manager Saucier expects that he will give Pere Marquette considerable trouble.

Sharkey-M'Carthy Bout Is Off

Jack Sharkey brought his injured hand to Dr. Charles B. Wilinsky at the Boxing Commission this morning and received the physician's verdict that he will be unable to indulge in his ring pastime for at least three weeks

The impending battle, therefore, between Sharkey and Pat McCarthy of Roxbury has been indefinitely postponed, and there will be no Suffolk A. A. bouts tomorrow night.

Sharkey's hand was diagnosed as having sustained a possible fracture, dislocated joint, and strained muscles. The injury was incurred during his fight with Eddie Huffman in Madison Square Garden.

Air to Be Full of Mitts at Pure Bouts Tonight

By RINGSIDE

ONE HUNDRED boxers are pivi to enter tonight's New England amateur boxing championships in Mechanics Building, with all stations pointing to a packed house and a treat for the lovers of the amateur boxing game.

Somewhat under the weather, Father Bill Cuddy is figured as being among the missing at the bouts. Cuddy, who is chairman of the American A. A. A. U., has been at home for the last few days suffering from a bad cold.

Greater Boston fistic followers will greet the amateur boxers, as the event is always one of the best shows held in this section of the country.

Joe Monte has been barred from competing in the heavyweight division, although the Brockton lad will be seen in the 175 division.

In the hefty division the fans can look for some fun with Bob Mills of Kelley & Hayes Gym opposing Elmer Moyer of Worcester, Phil McDonad of Roxbury, Warren Crowley of Dorchester, Jack Madison of Plymouth, Thatcher Taylor and Jeff Keivans of Dorchester.

The following amateur boxers appear in the New England championship boxing show tonight in Mechanics Building:

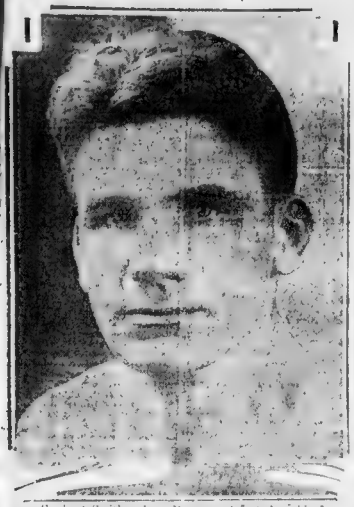
Inside Story of My Split With Kearns—By Jack Dempsey

'Manager Took Cut of 25 Per Cent. to Start With'



Gunboat Smith, whom Dempsey defeated in his first real battle under Jack Kearns' management. The victory brought Dempsey into the national limelight

This is the second of a series of twelve articles, by Jack Dempsey in which he reveals for the first time the real inside story of his split with his manager, Jack Kearns. The stories will be printed daily in the Boston Evening American.

'JACK KEARNS has received a great amount of credit for developing me—especially in the use of my left hand. The credit is not deserved. I do not say that to take away from him anything that is his just due—but I am merely stating the truth.

I have frequently read that he was supposed to have tied my [illegible] a hook. I would have to use my left, not only for attack, but also for punching—and so learn to put a left was far. It may be interesting to know that I naturally led with my right even in my earliest days, long before Kearns knew me, and as much damage with my left hand as I did with my right hand.

Any of my managers of the days of 1914, 1915 and 1916 or any opponents of that era—will bear me out in that statement. So far back as early in 1916, Fred Winsor, who was manager of the Elks, at Reno, Nev., at which I was [illegible] as a boy, [illegible] as a girl.

Yet through a series of events had the distinction of making a left-handed hitter out of me simply because I felt that I [illegible] wanted the credit, whether earned or not, it was okay with me.

Kearns also is credited with teaching me body punching. That is all wrong. The man who taught me body punching was John Lester Johnson—and he did not get paid by me or Kearns for his services. John Lester was the negro that I fought in a bout [illegible] in New York in 1916. Until I met up with Em I had no appreciation of the real value of punching to the body.

Like all kids, my main thought was to land a fist on the other fellow's chin. I could not see the value of driving a punch into the ribs or the stomach. I occasionally did, of course, in fights, even before I met John Lester Johnson.

First Real Battle Under Kearns With Gunboat Smith

BUT I did ll then simply because there was such a huge opening for the [illegible] of ribs. I would not resist the temptation to drive through. But it wasn't until I met Johnson that I became aware of the great worth of body punching—especially a right hander on the [illegible].

[illegible] a white [illegible] gave me a [illegible] I [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The Making of a Husband, a Serial on the Problems and Joys of Married Life

By Ann Lisle

AND I dropped my hands to my side and bent my head in a negative sort of resignation. It didn't seem to matter what happened. I was ready for whatever might befall. Somehow I got an impersonal sense of not counting—not caring.

There was a sudden scurry of wind that blew the draperies back from the open window and then sucked them out again in a round eddy. The trees rustled and bent as the wind began to moan among them in a dim minor. I felt cold. I went to the fire and put on a great log. Little flames began to crackle about it. I poked at the sticky embers beneath the log, glad to have some occupation colorful enough to absorb me for a moment.

I brushed up the hearth, kneeling to do my task well and warming my cold hands as I knelt.

The wind moaned louder than ever. I slipped to my feet and went to the window. It did not close easily. The sucking wind pulled the draperies out and they caught in the sash. Little puffs of snow were edging their way in the air. I managed to close the window and then I stood and watched the snow. It was coming down more and more rapidly. The big flakes began to whirl.

"There's a blizzard coming," I thought. "It may be snowed in.

A new horror came to terrify me. To be alone at The Birches, cut off from the world and with Tarasov prowling around somewhere out in the trackless wilds of a country snow storm—how would I bear that? And then I looked out and saw a gigantic figure outlined against the darkening sky. It was Tarasov. He was striding toward The Birches.

I hurried to Jim's room, and began rummaging in his bureau drawers. I felt that I must find Bertie Lingard's gun. After long, breathless minutes I came upon it. I slipped it into the deep pocket of my working smock. Thus armed, I stepped out into the studio and waited. Let Tarasov come! I was ready for anything.

The Birches seemed filled from everywhere, cut off from the world. I kept my eyes fixed resolutely on the front windows and away from the side where there was a view of the engrossing woods and the gigantic figure of Tarasov striding. I held my hand against the revolver I had put in my smock pocket. I was afraid of the gun but by no means so afraid as I was of the big Cossack I did not understand, and so could not trust.

"Perhaps Tarasov is about some business of his own," I thought. "He may not be coming here at all. And if he does, hasn't he taken up his lodgings out in that shack on the edge of the woods because he wants to protect you, Barbara Lyonna?"

But I couldn't ask a sense to my self. I was given a serious even as I used the name Tarasov has made to Russianize my title so it will fall on ears with more friendly cadence than the American—and to him "foreign"—Mrs. Harrison.

I didn't ask, but I knew Tarasov was coming closer and closer. I could feel him. Perhaps I heard his footsteps crunch the frozen ground as he approached.

The window parted, the curtain billed out and the wind sucked a whisper at the smoke from the grate. And still I could not bring myself to turn until I heard the giant Cossack's guttural:

"Hail, Barbara Lyonna. It is warm here. You should have plenty of wood. It gives a storm."

"Good afternoon, Dimitri Ivanovitch." I heard myself reply amazingly. "Is it not cold out there in your shack?"

"I am used to Winter," the man replied. "In Siberia I have seen snow above the head. But you are little and delicate. You must have logs. I go to the cellar and see if it is enough logs for you. It may come that the snow shuts you in.

Give Thought to the Mental Welfare of Your Child, Urges Dr. Reed

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

HAVE you ever given the mental welfare of your child or of those in your charge or community some thought?

Much can be accomplished toward the safe-guarding of the child's mind from maladies dependent upon negligible activities and lack of knowledge pertaining thereto.

The seeds of mental disorder are sown in childhood and the prevention of mental disease is a branch of child welfare, education and training. It starts, in fact, in the antenatal clinic and the nursery.

The influence of bad heredity to produce a low state of vitality with a low resistance to unfavorable influence, but it is no more important a factor than environment, which can largely be modified by care.

The causes of mental disorder are either (1) physical: injury, infection, toxic factors, unhealthy environment or unsuitable diet; or (2) physical: worry, emotional strain and overwork. The first signs of disorder are "nerves," neurasthenia and night terrors. Most mental diseases spring from the second group of causes.

Schoolmasters frequently overwork clever boys who are likely to win scholarships. These precocious children very often have a mild inherited taint, and overwork at this age often leads to mental sterility in later life. Masters should see that these boys get ample sleep—a need which is often overlooked. School before breakfast imposes a great strain.

Rapidly growing boys, especially at puberty, are apt to lounge about in easy chairs and be lazy in getting up in the morning in the holidays. This is a valuable defensive reaction and shows their need for physical rest and a generous allowance of sleep. Boys at this period are very often inattentive, fidgety and have bad reports. Schoolmasters should pay more attention to the personal side of the human boy than to his mental products. Boys are not sent to school to win testimonials to the transient success of a forcing system.

At private schools boys naturally get more individual attention and they should not be transferred to a public school too soon. A highly strung boy of thirteen years may suffer irreparable harm from going to a public school where the strain of adaptation may be too much for him. Children are apt to be trained too much in discipline and habit, too little in adaptability, which is power, for it means the readiness to face life and extract from it and one self the best possible results.

A failure to adapt is the chief and earliest sign of mental difficulty. Adaptability is nowhere more valuable than in sleep, and children should be accustomed to sleep in spite of noise, light and talking, on any kind of bed, floor or sofa that is convenient. Adaptability to meals is also valuable and a slavish adherence to time and quality in youth may be a misfortune later. An over-developed sense of time and punctuality is a curse, time should be given to children to use so that they may learn to handle it with sense.

Beatrice Fairfax Has Advice for Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, and have known a certain young man for some time. When we meet he never seems to speak at all seriously. Everything he says he jokes about. I always thought he was bashful, but recently I have found that he takes girls to theatres.

Will you please advise me how I can win his love? I love him dearly. HEARTBROKEN.

YOUR friend enjoys joking with you and there's no reason why you should not laugh and joke together. Have you ever encouraged his friendship by asking him to call on you? If you live at home, ask him to dine with you some evening and give him a pleasant, home-like time.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen. I went about for a year and a half with a young man of twenty. We later became engaged, then six months afterward we were married.

We are keeping our marriage a secret. Do you think this is right? If so, how long do you think we should do this?

HAPPY-TWO-MARRIED.

By all means tell your mother about your marriage, my dear. She loves you dearly and has your interest at heart and would be broken-hearted if she knew you were without her confidence from her in the most important matter of your life.

USE SULPHUR IF SKIN BREAKS OUT

Just the moment you apply Mentha-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist.

This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. Get a jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

Let a trial of Mentho-Sulphur show what this means to you. Send the coupon for it. Clip it now.

DON'T dose a child for a cold. You may upset the little one's digestion. Better use what thousands of mothers have learned to depend upon. Simply rub Vicks VapoRub over the child's throat and chest at bedtime and get the benefit of its two-fold action:—

(1) Direct to the inflamed air passages by its medicated vapors, released by the body heat, and

(2) Direct through the skin like an old-fashioned poultice, "drawing out" the soreness and pain.

GILDED KISSES By Beatrice Burton

Love Story of Two Boston Girls

here with you, Mary Rose!" he asked, putting his arm around her.

But Mary Rose shook her head.

Poor little mother!—she thought—there had been enough sorrow and heartbreak in her life without adding this unhappy memory to it. This marriage of Mary Rose's to her old playfellow and friend on his deathbed.

She looked down at the gray face on the pillows, and saw that Tom had opened his eyes a little, once more, and was watching her with a great peace and contentment in them. She laid her hand, with its bright ring, lightly on the bandages that bound his forehead.

And suddenly something that he had said to her, long ago, flashed across her brain, like lightning across darkness—"Sometimes I know wher things are going to happen to me, and I know this—that you and I are going to be married, sometimes, sure as Death!"

Sure as Death! And so they were going to be married—sure as Death!

To Mary Rose it seemed as if Death were waiting, somewhere outside in the darkness, somewhere outside where the wind rattled the windows and doors like an impatient hand—

And So They Wed

She shivered.

At four o'clock the minister came to marry them.

Tom's mother had collapsed and was in a drugged sleep in the room across the hall. But his father and Miss Sims, in their white linen clothes, stood side by side before the dresser where two tall candles flickered.

To Mary Rose they seemed like figures in a dream—the dreadful dream that went on and on—

She found her coat and her hat and slipped out into the cold dawn, and started home, alone.

Very quietly she let herself into the little brown house, went softly out into the kitchen and made a pot of coffee. But when it was made she could not drink it. The very smell of it made her ill.

As she started up the stairs, her mother's sleepy voice from above startled her: "Is that you, Mary Rose? What time is it? Was Tom badly hurt?"

Mary Rose went into her room, and sat down beside her on the bed. She opened her lips to speak, but no sound would come from them.

DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS, DRINK WATER

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead or your back hurts; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

NO NEED TO VAMP A MARRIED MAN, SAYS FAY KING

HIS WIFE
SHE PICKED OUT HIS PROPER CLOTHES—COACHED HIM IN THE NICETIES OF SOCIAL CONTACTS AND PLANNED HIS SUCCESS!
GEE! WHY IS IT ALL THE NICE MEN LIKE YOU ARE MARRIED ALREADY!
THEIR WIVES HAD MUCH TO DO WITH MAKING THE MARRIED MEN SO ATTRACTIVE!
HOW ABOUT PICKING OUT SOME YOUNG FELLOW WHO ONLY NEEDS A SMART LITTLE WIFE TO GUIDE HIM TO SUCCESS!
FAY KING

By Fay King

HOW often you hear single girls say with a sort of despondency: "All the nice men are MARRIED!"

Sometimes they go as far as to prefer to be the sweetie of some married man than to marry a man of their own! They say the young man who hasn't settled bores them! He doesn't know how to entertain them properly, hasn't the money to spend on them and isn't as interesting as the man who unfortunately belongs to somebody else!

It is true that the man who has succeeded in life, who has settled down with the responsibilities of family and home life, has poise and bearing that makes him seem more worth while in manner and appearances than the young fellow who is still finding his way in the world.

But it is also true that when that same married man was in the world, he was probably just as poor, crude and baggy as the lowest!

But he married—married the right sort of girl. A girl who had penetration and foresight and looked beyond the stage in which he was then and saw in him the real and embryo abilities the possibilities of his future success.

She married him. She trained him. She advised him to discard the kind of clothes you don't like on the young men you know and move him into the immaculate scenery that makes such an impression on you, my dear!

His taste in ties and monogrammed handkerchiefs is hers—not his! The smart little flower he wears in his coat she placed there for a long time before he got the habit of wearing it!

The background of a home and children she gave him help—I to give him that poise. She made him sure of himself!

And now you come along and rave over him—and his success! What you are really raving over is his wife's success!

And don't think it was all hardship and struggle making her what she is today! That wife of his got the same thrill and pleasure out of struggling for the success of her WORK as any actress or artist, or singer or writer, that struggled to success in her work!

Marriage is and always will be woman's greatest career!

And you, my dear, admiring this married man as he appears to be, show you have the same ability to make a man what this one now is! So why waste your time over the success of some other woman?

Look among your young men friends and you will find the makings of just such a man! Take him now, young, ambitious, pliable. You can have the same thrill and pleasure of developing him into a man who, in a few years from now, will be all you admire in man

A poor young man with a fine mind, a clean body, and good habits is no gamble! He'll make good! All he needs is the right wife.

But if you prefer to steal another woman's husband, don't gloat too much, my dear—you may rob her of him, but you cannot rob her of the success she made of him!

And remember he gave HER the BEST YEARS OF HIS LIFE.

Pointers and Recipes From Martha Lee's Pen

A Colonial Party

GREETINGS, everybody! The cherry tree and the hatchet have been so overdone in giving Washington Birthday parties that it seems about time to think up some celebration equally appropriate. What could be more fun than a Colonial costume party? It is a real rest and relaxation to lose one's own personality for an evening in the disguise of a Colonial gentleman or lady and if it is a masked party, all the better.

Colonial costumes are always attractive and so simple to make that it requires no great effort to get ready for the party. Crepe paper is always a solution for both the costumes and decorations. At a certain shop you can learn how to make a Colonial Dame costume all of paper with a white fichue, flowered panniers and even a lace edged bouquet. The Colonial Gentleman sewed to a cloth foundation, that the crepe paper be pasted or Gentleman's costume can be made there, too. Did you know that there is a brocaded paper that can be even used for the breeches? Of course the path of wisdom would be paper. These slip-overs are very popular because they are less work than a complete dress. They can be worn over a simple frock. The foundation is a full width of crepe paper cut out either oblong or round for the neck as it will hang down straight front and back. Turn under the outer edge from the shoulder to the waistline both front and back, and make one or two tucks to make the waist the correct width. To the foundation can be added ruffles, fringes, cut out designs, ad lib.

Invitations should be quaintly worded in the language of George's day. "Ye pleasure of Ye Company of Ye Slatyes Thus and So is requested, etc." The decorations may be of bunting, flags or crepe paper. For a large party, effective flag decorations can be hired at very small expense and the flag company will come and do the decorating for you. To hang over the refreshment table a big hanging bell will give a pretty effect.

The old fashioned dances which are so popular now should be a feature of the evening.

A Lady Baltimore cake with white icing, generously decorated with candied cherries may be the centerpiece of the refreshment table. Here's a simple recipe for this truly delicious cake.

LADY BALTIMORE CAKE.

Cream 1 cup of white shortening or butter a [illegible] gradually 2 cups of [illegible] listed sugar. Beat [illegible] until very fine. Mix toy. 3½ cups of cake flour, 2 teaspoons of baking powder, and add alternately with 1 cup of milk to the butter and sugar mixture. Then add 1 teaspoon of vanilla. Beat the whites of 6 eggs with a fork or wire whisk. (A Dover egg beater makes the eggs dry and your cake will be consequently dry.) Fold in the beaten egg whites gently. Turn into 3 buttered and floured square tins and bake in a moderate oven. Cover with Lady Baltimore frosting.

Martha Lee

She felt her mother's hand on hers, and her insistent voice again: "Was Tom badly hurt, Rosey?"

Tells Mother

Somehow or other she managed to tell her the whole story between the spasms of sobbing that racked her whole body—and her mother held her in her arms and cried with her. Cried with her for the sorrow and the grief and the cruelty of life that is part of its poignant glory.

* * *

It was daylight before Mary Rose was in her bed. And above the roofs of the city, the sun had come up and was shining as if there was nothing but happiness and joy in the whole world.

It was then that she remembered that today was Christmas Eve.

She lay down on her pillows, and incredibly, she fell asleep at once.

When she wakened her room was aglow with pale December sunlight. The handle of the door turned, and her mother opened it just a crack, and peeped in.

"I'm awake, dear. Come in." Mary Rose said, and raised herself on her elbow. "What's the word from the hospital?"

Mrs. Middleton came up.

She was carrying a little tray in her hands, and she came and set it down on the bed.

Last Summons

"Why, Tom seems to be resting comfortably, the nurse said," she told the girl. "They're going to phone, if there's any change. Here's a bit of toast. You eat it and I'll run down for the coffee. It's all made."

Mary Rose looked at the little watch that was strapped to her wrist. It was four o'clock. She had slept all day long!

"No," she said, "I'm going to get up and move around or I won't be able to sleep tonight. You take the toast downstairs, and I'll eat it when you have your supper."

The paper was lying on the corner of the kitchen table, when Mary Rose went down to the kitchen. As she started to open it, her mother took it from her.

"There's a piece in it about you and Tom," she said, narrowly watching her. "Are you sure you want to read it?"

"Why, of course—" And Mary Rose turned it to the front page.

There was the piece about halfway down the printed page. "Romantic Wedding in Hospital."

It told about the bedside wedding of "Miss Mary Rose Middleton and Lt. Thomas Fitzroy, Jr., who have been sweethearts from childhood. And it explained that Tom had been seriously injured, but did not hint that he could not possibly recover. In fact, it was quite a cheerful little article, when you stopped to remember that Tom was lying at the point of death.

Flossie saw it in the paper and called up right away," Mrs. Middleton said, pouring vegetable soup into two blue bowls and taking a panful of browned crackers out of the oven.

"I forgot to let her know about it. I declare I didn't know which end I was on, after you came home this morning and told me you were married! Lots of people called up today—Aunt Henny Blair, and Mr. Dexter and that nasty Miss MacFarians that Flossie used to work for—"

"John Manners must have seen it, too," Mary Rose said to herself "I wonder what he thinks—"

Then she made herself stop thinking of John Manners. She must not let herself think of him. She must put him out of her mind—forget that she loved him. She must remember that she was married to a man who was dying, a mile or two away. Married to Tom whom she loved as she might have loved a brother.

"It doesn't seem much like Christmas Eve, does it?" Mrs. Middleton asked her, presently when they had finished their soup, and were beginning the cold meat. "I remember last Christmas Eve—and how you and Tom and I trimmed that little tree for the dining room table."

From the darkness of the front hall, the telephone rang, and she got up and answered it.

"It was the hospital," she said, when she came back into the kitchen. "Now, Mary Rose, keep a stiff upper lip—there's no use breaking down, at a time like this. The nurse says Tom can't live more than an hour or so. And she wants you to go there right away."

You, too, can now have a whiter wash —without washboard rubbing

For millions of women this granulated soap takes the work out of washday

HOW would you like to such your wash clean every week—instead of rubbing, and scrubbing, and wearing yourself out over tubs and boilers!

You can do it! You can get your clothes whiter, cleaner than ever—in half the time—without touching a washboard! Even the most soiled things need only a gentle rub between the fingers to make them snowy!

All you need on washday

Just let the wash soak in Rinso suds. You need no bar soap, chips or powders—just Rinso. In hard water, in soft water, it makes rich, creamy suds that seep through the soiled clothes and gently loosen the dirt. Then you just rinse, and the clothes are whiter than ever—whiter than you could rub them—whiter than boiling could make them! Sterilized, too!

Saves clothes—saves hands

Clothes last longer this way, because the dirt is not scrubbed out, but soaked out. And Rinso is so mild that you could soak your finest white table cloth in it for days without harm. It contains no acids, harsh chemicals or bleaches to injure the clothes or fast colors. Your hands show the difference—they don't get red and parboiled.

In washing machines, too

Use Rinso in your washing machine. You never saw clothes get so white and bright! 23 washing machine manufacturers recommend it.

Try Rinso once and be convinced. Get it from your grocer and follow directions on package.

A Hub woman, Mrs. A. McQuade, says:

"So many friends told me about Rinso I simply had to try it. And how glad I am! It made Monday one of my easiest days. Now I just soak my clothes in Rinso suds overnight. In the morning my washing is all done for me—cleaner and whiter than ever. No hard rubbing. We never knew how white clothes could be until we used Rinso."

Rum Queen Hustles to Make Up for Loss of $1,650

Murdock got out now he was a prisoner in the very jail from which he decided to plead guilty and was fined $1,000. Not having the money he was committed in default of the fine and is serving out his sentence. Boston was fined $ I don't know who he and of him.

My second capture not only deprived me of the valuable services of Harry Murdock which I greatly regretted, but it also made a dent of $1,650 in my finances. Loss of my coach and the liquor charge totalled that, I figured. I was hauling the load for Thanksgiving consumption in Greater Boston.

In fact it was the busiest season Mr Blank, the Boston buyer, had already begun to pace Christmas orders with me when I fell. I had to fall, not altogether because of the profits to myself, but I felt in a position where I was anxious to accommodate him he had been so decent.

He had treated me on the level in every transaction and had coached me in many ways that lessened my difficulties and hazard on the road. I missed Murdock's help tremendously with the holiday rush for liquor under way. I had to play a lone hand.

Also it limited me to one car which was a distinct hardship and disappointment in the face of my experience to operate on schedule. And right here I have an explanation to make before I forget it.

Spars With Man

Quite a few persons asked me how I ever decided to take the risk of smuggling rum across the Canadian border when, as they argued, I had to meet such stiff competition in the trade. Not a few bootleggers—men bootleggers, too—this position in their talks with me.

"Why sir," a silk looking fellow at Pop's said one day "you can buy it cheaper under your own flag and save gas and tires and yourself a lot of worry. And there wouldn't be half the danger of being trapped."

I didn't like the fellow. I had made it a rule to keep out of conversation and contact with such types. It netted me to talk. I knew what I was doing. I designed to answer him more to sound him out than anything else. I thought he might be a spotter disguised and planned to put him off the scent.

"What if the stranger were dogging me?" I thought. The border is alive with "stools," as the gentry call them—men and women masquerading and pouncing with every scrap of information. Everybody suspects everybody else. It's an uneasy, strained atmosphere. It gets on one's nerves if one has the time or the inclination to dwell upon it. I preferred not to.

Off the Scent

But I felt this stranger's remark was a sort of challenge and I crossed verbal blades with him.

"What you say is prob'ly right, but why bother me?" I answered in a frigid unconcern.

Because on this said he quickly. "I got the wrong number. They tipped me him were only two and I just ventured advice in a friendly way."

Well I'm not I'm a traveling saleswoman. My line is jewels and perfumes. I accept your apology. No offence.

"Pops smile and lightning wink gave me the cue to angle further. Ah the bearded one

"But I always supposed," I said, "that liquors could be bought on this side of the line more cheaper and be depended on. I should think reliable goods are more important even than the price."

"You've said a mouthful, sis" he answered.

My plan had been to start an argument for others to join in, while I listened as an innocent bystander and checked up. It worked. The unshaven guest nibbled hard. And he hadn't talked very long before I had his number and was satisfied he was no spotter.

"Why the rum-running schooners make such frequent landings along the New England coast now that they can undersell the Canadian market," said the stranger. "They're getting rye in the States that comes in on the Western coast and retails as low as $6 a quart. The Scotch and champagne is as cheap and sometimes a buck or two cheaper than we can buy it here."

Liquor Compared

"There's two sides to every story" drawled Pop, flipping the ash from a very nice smelling cigar. "If you sail, partner, is probably true in a general way, but don't forget that the so-called 'imported' champagne being peddled in the States is made right in New York State, most of it, and the Scotch with the fancy labels is nothing but moonshine.

"What a runner gets who slips it across the Canadian border is all good—if he knows where to buy. That's life insurance to the thirsty ones down in New England. A man at the head of a bank or big business can't afford to shuffle off with directors' meetings coming and big contracts to be signed, by just slipping from a mystery bottle.

"What Boston and New England folks are willing to pay for is the guarantee, which the average smuggler can't give 'em. Another thing you mustn't lose sight of, is that Canadian booze can be delivered on a closer schedule than the doubtful landings made by rum pirates who have to flutter outside the 12-mile limit until he—freezes over at times.

"No, pard," concluded Pop, "the Canadian bootlegger's trade mark is 'SAFETY AND SCHEDULE.'"

Pop took the very words I was thinking, out of my mouth.

In tomorrow's chapter the "Duchess of Alcohol" will describe her third capture in New Hampshire and the really dangerous time that followed.

HIGH HAT HARRIET

By Marie C. Luttrell

"CLOSE the door, Ann, and do try to be quiet around the house. By the way, don't get into that jam cake in the pantry when you come from your music lesson: The cake is for tea time. I am going skating and two or three men will likely be along when I come back."

Eighteen year-old Ann, who was kept as juvenile looking as possible, gave the door a vicious little slam and ran down the steps with as much noise as her small feet could make.

"Some day she won't get away with all this high hat stuff around me. You'd think I was a rowdy little girl the way Harriet speaks to me. And mother aids and abets her.

To Bring Cash

"Darling mummy! She thinks Harriet is so beautiful that she will bring honor and cold cash to this house when she trails a tulle veil to the altar. Maybe she will! But I hate to see a nice chap—like, Phil Lester—just voluntarily put himself under Miss High Hat's pressing thumb," ruminated the girl as she picked up her music roll and started out to the street to walk to her music lesson.

Up the driveway whirled a shining blue roadster. Phil Lester brought it to a stop as suddenly that it sounded like a cheering horse pulled back on his haunches.

"Hello!" he called and Ann, beaming, stepped up on the running board. "Come go skating with me!"

Ann's blue eyes fairly danced. "Do you mean this as an invitation?" she asked archly, affecting a grown-up manner.

"Honest-to goodness! Cross my heart!" Phil opened the door. "Be a sport! Come on!"

The happiness faded from Ann's bright face and her eyes grew wistful. He was so kind and sweet and gentle with her. He was too nice for selfish Harriet, but far be from her to tell any family secrets. She began to laugh gaily.

"Ann," she mimicked as if in fun, "you do annoy us. Run along and do lessons or the radio or anything but don't bore us." Ann leaned a little nearer to him. "There's jam cake for tea. If you'll save me a thick slice, Mr. Phil, some day, I may make you a whole one when I am married and have my own pots and pans. Katie is so finicky. I never get to go into the kitchen unless it's her day off." She jumped down from the running board. I must toddle along now. These little fingers that simply thrill to the touch of an aluminum pan have to do a sonata of Bach's. Goodbye!"

Pleaded With Her

"Ah, say, I'm quite in earnest about the skating party. Do come! Cut the sonata. Back went Ann's feet over the side of the car, looking at her intently.

Ann's mother treated her as if she were still a child. Harriet was mean and jealous of her. So, hungry for a little kindness and friendliness, Ann turned back and rather timidly put her hand on Phil's sleeve. "You're a dear to ask me. I'm really grateful a lot. But I know Harriet wouldn't want me." Then she was gone, flashing under the snow crusted trees like an elf in her red tam and short fur coat.

"Ah, you do look beautifully today" cried her music teacher when she had played the sonata. "Under all your frivolity and apparent light heartedness, you have soul, Miss Ann," commented the professor seriously. "You play as if you had lived, and had really loved and suffered."

Ann's blue eyes were downcast. Then she [illegible] her head and laughed. "I'm suffering now," she admitted, "I don't want to play Bach. I want to go skating or make a jam cake or—or track rabbits in the snow."

"Run along" said the professor, laughing with her. "You roguish child! You can't be serious for half an hour to save your life."

The crackle of logs in the living room fireplace attracted Ann and she ran in and dropped down in a big upholstered chair. There was a low bowl of violets on the table and Ann bent over them, sniffing them luxuriously. "Harriet's," she gloated. "Everything is Harriet's. Everyone loves her, run after her—oh, oh, oh—"

She laid her bobbed head on the arm of the chair and for once in her lifetime gave way to real grief.

"Don't do that, Ann! What on earth is the matter?" asked a comforting voice and Ann was conscious that someone had sat down on the arm of the chair and had pulled her up and was holding her against a rough coat.

Fright Dried Tears

Fright dried her tears. "Did you—did you hear me? Well, I didn't mean—anything—it's all a joke——"

She was almost hysterical.

"There's no joke in anything for me that makes you cry, Ann," said Phil soberly.

She thought that she ought to jump right up and laugh and tell him it was just one of her jokes, but it was so warm and comfortable and friendly to hide her tear-stained face against his tobacco scented coat she threw discretion to the winds. A little shuddering sob ran through her and Phil's arm around her tightened. And then the devil himself made her wish that Harriet would march in that very minute! But no one came and the clock on the mantel ticked solemnly many, many times before Ann very gently pulled herself away and looked up at Phil.

"You're always so kind to me. Please excuse me for making a baby of myself. You'll speak now why Harriet high hats it around me—oh," she grew apologetic for the slang, "I mean, treats me as if I were still a little girl. Why, I'm eighteen!" Her eyes were wide and shining. "Some girls are married by then and have—have a baby."

Phil was very quiet. There was no smile on his face. He was staring into the flames of the blazing fire. "I stayed behind to—to take you skating, Ann. Want to go? He looked at her then.

She jumped up and faced him. "Why, you're a prince, Mr Phil A fairy story prince."

He regarded her gravely. Ann became uncomfortable. He had never been so serious before. She stepped a little closer to him. "Like you. Are you trying to tell me that you are going to marry Harriet? Is that it?"

He took both of her hands and held them in his. "I'm sorry," she added, just to make conversation at that tense moment. "That I said what I did about Harriet. She's all right. She's lovely," said Ann humbly.

No More High Hat

"She's not going to high hat it around you any more, Ann. You seemed just a child to me until—until a few weeks ago, when I began to realize that it was to see you I came here. I wanted to hear your merry laughter and your funny little jokes and to see your beautiful face."

"Is," breathed Ann, unconsciously drawing nearer to him, as a flower leans toward the light and warmth of the sun God.

"Do you think that I'm going to be pretty——"

"I think that you are as lovely as a fairy story prince——"

And I think you're a prince Ann's laughter caught in her throat like a sob. Don't make fun of me, please. You've always been so good to me."

And then Phil Lester was standing up, holding her close in his arms and telling her the story that is old and yet as fresh and fragrant as springtime itself. The moon, foe a maid that many leavens all the heavy burdens of life.

"And you'll promise to give me a shining aluminum cake pan for a wedding present. And I can run and help patter around in my own little kitchen. I won't keep a maid, thank you——"

And Phil Lester who had vowed to give her many trills, laughingly agreed to all her demands.

All too soon came Harriet to give her many trills, laughingly agreed to all her demands.

All too soon came Harriet to give two or three men with her she had promised seeing Ann stopped aghast. "Ann, you'd be all up and brush your hair. I look positively desolate."

And Ann looked at Phil and moved quite close to him protectingly. Then for the first time her whole life, Ann replied to Harriet.

"Phil rumpled it. He likes it that way."

COOK-CO'OS by Ted Cook

If anyone will kindly pay strict attention for a moment, the following announcement will be made:

(From Dearborn Independent)

In Chinese Turkestan the women, the marriage ceremony by the mullah and the bill of divorcement are given at the same time.

Obviously the Chinese Turkestan plan has a lot of merit and should be given a fair trial in this country.

* * *

The present clumsy system congests the courts and is a constant source of annoyance to lawyers.

But the two-in-one idea has vast possibilities, to wit:

(a) Movie actors and directors would not have to take so much time out for legal conferences, thus—

(b) Production would be speeded up, with consequent cut in production costs.

(c) This in turn would lower admission prices in theatres.

(d) As a result, the masses could spend more evenings at the movies.

(e) Consequently there would be fewer home wrangles and a gradual elimination of the divorce evil.

FOXY GRANDPA'S DAILY BEDTIME STORY

"YES," said the young English lady whom we were visiting in Northern England. "It is a great sight to see a real old-fashioned English banquet, where they bring in a whole wild boar on a great silver platter, as they did in feudal days. "I suppose it tastes something like pork," suggested Bobby.

"Very much so," she agreed.

"Do you ever have wild boar?" he asked.

"We used to," she answered. "There are still some around here and are hunted. But I don't care to taste it any more."

The words were hardly out of her mouth, when I heard a scuffling under the sofa on which she was sitting and then I saw two tusks come out from under it. Bobby jumped on a chair and Bunny took a flying leap and landed in my pocket. Because following that first poke of the tusks out came a fat, half-grown wild boar!

"Do you mean to tell me that this fellow was ever wild?" I speak. She stroked him and then he lay down at her feet as might a tame hound.

"I'll tell you about him," said the young lady.

"One Autumn—just before Christmas—there was a boar hunt here in the county. Afterwards I found a little ball of fuz crying in the woods.

"It was this little fellow and I am quite sure that his mother had been killed in the hunt the day before.

"You have a real protector in him," I laughed.

"Oh, yes," she said. "No dog or tramp would ever attack me with Ethelbert along. That's why I always take him on my walks, even if the village folk do think him a strange companion.

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acidity as a solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this fouring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Check a Cold —in this way Overnight

COLDS are easy to stop if you take the proper precaution soon enough.

When you start to sneeze or are aware of a chill coming on, drink a good, old-fashioned hot lemonade. Drink it as hot as you can stand it.

Then take a warm bath immediately and go right to bed under plenty of warm covers. See how much better you feel in the morning.

The effectiveness of hot lemonade in the prevention or treatment of a cold is due to more than its heat.

Millions of people used this effective "old-fashioned way" during the influenza epidemics with great success, and now they always take hot lemonade to stop a cold.

Their experience is valuable to you. Ward off that impending cold in this pleasant, healthful way, that so many others use.

Children should have hot lemonade after play in the cold out-of-doors. If their feet are wet from snow, beware a cold. Let them drink a real, old-fashioned hot lemonade at once. Just squeeze the juice of a lemon in glass or cup of hot water. Add sugar if you wish.

California lemons make the best lemonade. They are practically seedless, tart and heavy with acid juice. Buy them at any first-class store. Try the "hot lemonade way" tonight.

of ray, humor and some serious thought may be read on automobiles as they fly past you. One sees no person, driving a small car in a very high speed, had written on his back curtain: "Jesus, the Light of the World." Another automobile sign, in lighter vein, reads: "In case of fire, throw this in."

THE PEOPLE of this coast here, on the high desert or farther West, at the Pacific's edge, are all cheerful, with a serious side predominant. You drive under a twisting, dangerous, short tunnel, and read on one side: "Read your Bible." On the other: "Fear God, you are facing eternity." On the whole, however, the roads are safe, drivers careful.

EVERYWHERE YOU see the sign: "Buy Goods Made in California, and Build Up Your State." That sign is recommended to foolish forgetting that demand goods made in England and France, forgetting that money made in this country should build up this country.

LOOKING FROM the window of this little ranch house you see five men baling alfalfa, cut last October, and now as green inside the stack as when it was cut. Twenty-eight dollars a ton is the price it brings, here on the ranch, and the crop runs eight tons to the acre, seven crops a season. Tell Eastern farmers about that.

THE HOLSTEIN COW, looking at the baling machine, gives five gallons of milk a day, enough for all on the ranch and some left over for butter. David Macaulay, who is handling the alfalfa bales, says: "They would not believe that, back in Lakewood, N. J."

MANY THINGS are happening, far from this spot on the Mojave desert, and some should be mentioned. A judicial decision, declaring the tax on gifts illegal, is welcome. That law was simply a good excuse for selfishness, unwilling to give away anything. Every man worth while would give away as fast as he can, in the name of his wife and children, and beyond the reach of any meanness that he may develop later.

CONGRESS DEVOTES thirty-four million dollars to aircraft, not enough, but better than nothing. And the total appropriation for the navy three hundred and sixteen millions.

The idiocy of that last figure is made clear by the fact that if war of the modern kind should come the airships would have to protect our hundreds of millions worth of ships floating on the water. Only submarines and flying machines would be of any value.

In any real business, managed by competent business men, such trash as our battleships would have been junked long ago.

THE GOVERNMENT, fighting the National Food Products Corporation, explains that the plan is "to fight a tendency toward trusts, rather than to attack trusts already existing."

The battle against big business, which is the real name of the "trust" was fought and lost long ago.

MODERN BUSINESS, to succeed, must be big business. The government's business is to supervise big business, control it and encourage it, not discourage it. No business in the United States is as big as it ought to be.

ANTHONY BIMBA, editor of a Communist newspaper, to be tried for blasphemy under a law two hundred and twenty-nine years old, is accused of denying the existence of God. His lawyer will say that the Constitution, which guarantees free speech, rules out the blasphemy charge.

WHY NOT LEAVE the case to the Ruler of the Universe, in whose omnipotence the "trust magnate believes and He has power to wither Mr. Bimba, as the barren fig tree was withered. But it is possible that Omnipotence is not much interested in what Mr. Bimba believes.

The way to make blasphemous or other, important is to take it seriously.

THOUSANDS CHEERED Mr. Trotzky, of Russia, while he denounced the United States as the world's slave driver. He said this grasping nation was trying to get a mortgage on the whole world.

The whole world seems to want to sell us a mortgage, for bonds, and we are buying billions of the world's bonds, which may come home to roost at very points on the dollar.

TROTZKY'S JUDGMENT on wealth is not sound. It may be. His salary from the

A GOOD, CLEAN NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

BE A BOSTON BOOSTER

Be a "Go-Getter"

But Be Also a Determined Keeper. That's Harder

Everybody hears about the nimble American "Go-Getter."

He starts off, KEEPS going, never comes back, until he GETS what he went after.

That's fine, noble.

But GETTING is one thing, KEEPING is another, and more difficult.

We are all told to be "go-getters," all taught how to go after things, how to "produce." Too little is said about KEEPING WHAT YOU GET after you get it.

TO KEEP and USE WISELY, that is the difficult problem.

Consider the poor Osage Indians. Their "Great White Father" put them on a "reservation" in northeastern Oklahoma, in a desolate, hilly country.

White man didn't want it, so the Indians got it.

There they lived peacefully, working hard, no troubles, no worries.

Suddenly white men found oil in great quantities on the lands of the Indians.

Uncle Sam "protected the Indians" as well as he could, and as well as the greed of the white man would allow.

Whoever got oil from the Indians had to pay the Indians.

As a result, THE OSAGE INDIANS ARE A RICH NATION.

Before the oil was found, it is doubtful whether any one of them had ever seen more than one hundred dollars at one time in his life.

Today the AVERAGE INCOME of the Osage Indians is $1,000 a month, about $12,000 a year.

You may say, "How happy those Osage Indians must be with the enormous revenue that comes to them so easily."

If you think that, you don't know human nature.

The Indians got that money WITHOUT BEING TRAINED FOR IT, without knowing what money means, and without knowing anything about KEEPING it and using it.

As a result, in spite of all the laws against taking whiskey into Indian territory, whiskey flows in a steady stream among the Osages, taking their money in exchange.

Indians with so much money, no necessity for the work to which they were accustomed, are vanishing rapidly.

What has happened to these red men would happen to millions of white men also if they should suddenly find themselves rich, without having worked for the money.

They wouldn't die off as rapidly, for their ancestors perhaps knew what it was to work and save.

But this you may write on your cuff as a constant remembrance:

HE WHO GETS THAT FOR WHICH HE HAS NEVER WORKED WILL NOT BE HAPPY OR SUCCESSFUL IN THE USING.

On Guard!

Eternal Vigilance Is the Price of the Direct Primary

Who is it that wants the Direct Primary law repealed, or who are THEY who would wipe it from the statute books?

Mr. H. Styles Bridges asked and answered the question at a meeting of the League of Women Voters, in Concord, New Hampshire.

This is Mr. Bridges' answer, we shall be glad to know what YOU think of it:

"From my travels about New Hampshire, extending over a period of several years, and from my observation of the methods used and the people championing the repeal of the Direct Primary law in this State during the last Legislature, I have come to the conclusion that the majority of those who favor the repeal of the law in this State come under four classes:

"Professional politicians.

"Defeated candidates.

"Prospective candidates for office who have personal or political records they do not dare to submit to the people.

"Disappointed office-seekers."

Mr. Bridges does not believe, he told the ladies, that citizens who are intelligent enough to vote at a general election will ever surrender to a few bosses the right to name the candidates at that election.

Our own observation tells us that the price we shall have to pay for the direct primary is ETERNAL VIGILANCE. The adroit and capable gentlemen who would throw it into the discard are playing for tremendous stakes. They hope, no doubt, that one of these days they will find Mr. and Mrs. John J. Citizen fast asleep.

Millions in Potatoes

But Don't Forget That Fertilizers Cost Money and That Work in the Potato Field IS Work

The State of Maine's bumper crop of potatoes last year was worth $68,340,000, or about 71 per cent. of the value of ALL Maine crops for the year.

Aroostook County's claim to be THE potato land of the United States probably will go unchallenged, the five-year average yield per acre in that section being 262 bushels, as compared with 130 bushels per acre in New York, 108 bushels in Minnesota and 98 bushels per acre in the United States as a whole.

Let no one begrudge the Maine potato grower his occasional year of GREAT prosperity. The value of his 1925 crop was THREE TIMES THE AVERAGE VALUE FOR THE FIVE PRECEDING YEARS.

In many cases, no doubt, the potato man is "just beginning to see daylight, again." He is fully deserving of his one good year in six. Certainly, he is not to blame if a crop that was worth $68,340,000, when it left the farm, cost many MORE millions when it was placed upon the dinner table of the nation.

Now the Truth Can Be Told

AN earnest man willing to dare for his convictions seldom lacks applause.

General Mitchell will get plenty of that as he carries his cause to the people. He will speak tonight in Tremont Temple on "America's Place in the Air."

Applause, however, soon ceases. Unsupported, it means little.

This country owes Mitchell more than that. It owes a careful weighing of his arguments and a decision that will mean something.

The issue isn't one man; it is an air force fit and competently handled. It is America adequately defended.

PEACE LITERATURE ALL TOO SCANTY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE future grows from the seeds of thought planted by literature.

The French and American revolutions were the culmination of the writings of Rousseau, Voltaire, and Thomas Paine.

The tales of Homer made Ulysses The Great Stone Face of Greece which moulded and shaped the character of its people.

The emphasis of literature in time becomes the emphasis of life.

The literature of the past has been filled with Walter Scotts and Rudyard Kiplings—with men who sang the glories of the battlefield.

Laureates of war have been many; singers of the sagas of the Peacemen too few.

A shift in emphasis—the building of a literature of peace where benefactors of mankind are presented in their true heroic mould—will be more puissant in making peace than all mechanical means known to men.

Men seek as the pearl of great price in life personal vindication—the feeling that they embody the qualities presented to them as heroic.

The literature of the past has pictured men of war as red-blooded; men of peace as anemic and uninteresting. It has presented physical courage as a primary virtue; intellectual and moral courage as subordinate.

In the time of Peter the Great, three-fourths of the children died of smallpox. Now epidemics of this dread disease are practically unknown. This was brought about by scientists, men of Peace.

One of the great heroes of Peace was Louis Pasteur, whose discoveries in bacteriology are said to have saved more in actual money in France in a few years than the whole of the Franco-Prussian war debt.

Yet not one per cent. of the people who know the main events in the lives of Alexander the Great, a man who crucified two thousand prisoners in one place, and Caesar, who rose to fame on the corpses of 1,100,000 men, even know the birthplace of this great benefactor of mankind.

The life takers have been glorified; the life savers ignored.

The world needs men of genius to present the glamour of the heroic in the men of peace.

This demands a greater, more subtle art.

The men of war are spectacular, colorful, they move rapidly, their gestures on the stage of the world are large, sweeping, operatic.

The men of peace—of science and thoughtful study—seem unflashing, lacking interest, their activity is slow moving, cautious, and only time demonstrates the magnitude of their work.

One is the landslide; the other the glacier.

Always the greater artist is required to show the true dramatic character of the glacier.

Educators fighting against ignorance, scientists fighting against disease, preachers fighting against evil, present on the small and often ill-lit stage of the everyday, all the fortitude, courage and dauntless enthusiasm glorified in the many sagas of war.

Virtues and strength of character in peace pursuits are no less evident—only they are not associated with as spectacular conditions.

Realistic "What Price Glories" and "The Enemies" are stripping the tinsel from warfare.

But combined with this trend of writing that disillusions the glamour of war is needed a literature showing the heroes of peace in the full attractiveness of their heroism.

For there is inescapable truth in Hinton's words, "The only way to abolish war is to make peace heroic."

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

THE details of a wedding journey are so perplexing that a touring bureau is now selling tickets for personally conducted honeymoons.

THIS is a great idea for inexperienced couples who have only been married once.

BUT after you've had three or four weddings you can take the trip by yourselves.

THE first honeymoon always gets you fussed. One groom went down to the depot the other day, checked his wife, and kissed the trunk.

HE got so excited that he carried his own grips.

YOU can generally tell a man who's on his second or third honeymoon. His wife is usually struggling with the suitcases.

HE'S perfectly calm, he's seen Niagara Falls two or three times.

THE water looks the same no matter what bride you have with you.

OF course, the new bride is anxious to get there. She's afraid somebody will turn the water off.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

HOW many mistakes have you promised yourself you'll make this New Year?

Yes, I said "mistakes."

You thought I'd say "good resolutions," didn't you?

Well, good resolutions are nice things to make. And we like to make them.

We like to make them because they're a safe bet. We know we'll be much better off, physically, mentally and financially, if we cut out smoking or drinking; if we stop losing our tempers or gossiping; if we take two lumps of sugar instead of three, or get up on time or pay off that debt we owe Bill.

Making good resolutions like that is just like buying insurance. Or investing in a good bond at 6 per cent. There's no risk in it. It's all to the good, and you, yourself, get the net profits.

So naturally Making Good Resolutions is a popular practice before a new year.

But how about a few resolutions that aren't so safe and profitable? How about doing a little promising for your soul that isn't 100 per cent selfish?

How about promising yourself you'll make a few selfish blunders—and run some brave risks—

And commit some generous mistakes?

How about attempting a few stunts that may not lay up treasures for you in heaven, but that are pretty sure to get you a good raising here on earth?

For instance, there's that shiftless Smith family. They're the neighborhood's worst pest. But the youngest kid is sick and the second boy is in bad with the police and the mother needs a new coat and the old man is out of work and not one in the bunch has a decent pair of shoes.

How about handing over a few dollars to the Smiths?

Yes, I know they're lazy and inefficient and dumb. And you'll never get your money back. And they won't be grateful.

But why not take a chance?

Take a chance in giving—

Take a chance in loving—

Take a chance in living—

Even if you're laughed at—

Even if you lose—

Are you always going to play safe?

If so, what's the use of wasting new year on you?

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

WHEREFORE, my Daughter, doth any man seek to master a "Memory Course"?

For lo, what is so docile, what is so discreet, what is so perfectly trained as man's memory?

Helen Rowland

Behold it will sleep peacefully, as a good dog, through a hundred important duties—but, it never faileth to remind him of an unimportant pleasure.

Yea, verily, a man can forget anything on earth which annoyeth him, embarrasseth him, boreth him, discomforteth him or doth not amuse him!

Lo, he will forget to mail his wife's letter—and remember to walk four blocks out of his way to purchase a new set of golf balls.

He will forget his wedding anniversary—but never the opening date of the baseball season!

Go to. So long as a man is in love, he forgetteth everything else save the WOMAN—but, when his ardour hath cooled, he forgetteth the woman for everything else!

HOW THE SCRIBBLER BETRAYS HIS LACK OF POISE

Of all the nuisances the "scribbler" is the worst.

It matters not that it is paper belonging to another, the "scribbler" will leave his mark if he can get anything to mark with.

The telephone book is a favorite book with the "scribbler" who fills in the time between waits by writing certain numbers on the margins.

It may be a visiting card, left at the door recently, that comes in for its share of circles and dots.

On your newspapers, magazines, books the chronic and thoughtless "scribbler" draws his lines to suit his erractic fancy.

Of all the senseless tricks, marking up space to fill time is the silliest.

If you want to show your lack of consideration for your friend's property mark it up.

If you want to show that your own brains are wool gathering with not a connected, concentrated thought for the moment, keep that pencil drawing without aim or purpose and set yourself down as the "scribbler nuisance."

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "MIRACLES"

Men and women WANT
MIRACLES,
Especially MARRIED men
And women;
They BELIEVE what Happened ONCE can Happen again. It CAN,
But often it DOESN'T.
Even so, REPETITION is Not a MIRACLE.
MOST people have known
The water of good fellowship
To be TURNED into
The WINE OF LOVE,
And many MARRY
On the strength of it,
And then SIT BACK and Expect to be HAPPY
For the rest of their Lives. The BIRTH of Love IS a miracle, but
His GROWTH is a matter
OF ATTENTION.
And if love does not Get PROPER attention,
One of two things will happen—
The WINE will turn back
Into WATER, or
SOME ONE will be left
With an EMPTY glass.

WHEN IS THE TRUE NOON TIME?

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Why do not the days lengthen at the same rate in the morning as in the evening? I see by the daily report that the sunrise has vanished at the same hour since December 21, but the sun has set later each day up to now, January 11.

A. M. T., Chicago."

I HAVE made a little picture which may help you. You must begin by understanding that the clock and the sun are like "Betsy and I"—they "are out." Only four times a year do they manage to get together, and then the reconciliation is extremely brief.

Like other family troubles, this discord between the sun and the clock is a consequence of too much love of convenience, or perhaps we might say of too much civilization, for savages do not have to struggle with two kinds of noon.

Because the earth bravely around the sun in an elliptical orbit, and goes faster when it is near the sun, and slower when it is farther away, and also because the earth's axis of rotation is not perpendicular to the plane of its orbit, the actual lengths of the natural days and nights varies.

If the sun crosses the meridian, or noon line, LATER than the time when the clock hands show noon, of course the afternoon is lengthened in comparison with the forenoon.

It must be so, for, as you can see on the diagram, if the sun is fas happens about February 11, more than 14 minutes later than the clock-hand in reaching the noon position, then those 14 minutes are taken from the forenoon and added to the afternoon, so that the total length of the afternoon will be twice 14 minutes, or almost half an hour, longer than the forenoon.

This increase of the afternoon in comparison with the forenoon is a gradual process, which begins in December and becomes noticeable about Christmas. It arises from the fact that in preparing the almanac the hours of sunrise and sunset are calculated from the movement of the real sun, but the time used is mean time, or clock time, which has the effect of displacing the clock noon to one side of the real noon, which is shown by a sun-dial

The varying difference between "clock-time" and "sun-time," is called the "equation of time," and it is represented by the curve exhibited in our picture from Jan. 1 at the top to Dec. 31 at the bottom, the vertical line in the center representing the position of the un-

If you look at the course of the curve in December, at the bottom of the picture, you will see that during the entire month the forenoons were longer than the afternoons, but were losing away, and this loss became more noticeable on approaching the Winter solstice, the time when the total length of the day begins to increase in our hemisphere.

Just before Christmas the sun and clock were together, and afterward the sun become "slow," and then the afternoons were absolutely, as measured by clock-time, longer than the forenoons, and they will continue to be so until the middle of April, although. After Feb. 11 forenoons will increase relatively, reaching a balance on April 15, when noon entirely lost caste, and when "daylight-saving" [illegible]
